LAW REPORTS.

ACTION AGAINST MILITARY GOVERNOR.

JUDGMENT RESERVED.

In the Court of Appeal yesterday, before the Master of the Rolls, Lord Justice Ronan, and Lord Justice O'Connor, Mr. Healy, K.C., continued his argument in the case of Miss Nellie Vaughan against Colonel Willis, Military Governor of Cork. The plaintiff issued a writ against the Military Governor to recover damages for the destruction of her house and furniture in Washington street, Cork, by the military. The defendant obtained from the King's Bench Court an order staying the action, on the ground that the burning of the property was a military act in a martial law area. The plaintiff appealed from that order. Mr. Healy argued that there was no case in British history where land or property was taken by the King without payment. The Restoration of Order in Ireland Act, which was passed during this "war" in Ireland, had made no provision for acts such as that which the plaintiff complained of in this case. The King abandoned the power in John's time to take property of the subject without conpensation, and he had never got it back. It was a remarkable thing that Parliament, in enacting the Restoration of Order statute, did not deem it necessary to put into it anything to say that it was portion of military duty to destroy, by way of punishment, the houses of the subjects.

The Master of the Rolls—Your argument is that it is a recognition by Parliament that the ordinary law does not justify military acts.

Mr. Healy—I say that there never was power legally to punish an innocent person by the burning of his house, war or no war.

Lord Justice O'Connor—The point is whether during the "war" we have power to consider it at all—whether the ordinary tribunals can inquire into the legality of these acts.

Mr. Healy—Including rape, the sacking of convents, and even outrages on the Blessed Sacrament?

The Master of the Rolls—The military authorities have issued orders to the civil courts not to try certain cases; that is going very far.

Mr. Healy—The ordinary tribunal now in Ireland is the Courtmartial. They try felonies, and such cases as theft, etc. In the reported cases, there is no case like this—where property is destroyed for punitive purposes. A riot takes place in Belfast, and you have a labour Lord Lieutenant, who issues a proclamation that a state of war exists; a Catholic regiment is sent down and it burns the property of the merchant princes, and, perhaps, the Parliament House of Belfast. Is that act not to be justiciable because the Lord Lieutenant issues a proclamation when a thousand Catholics are disemployed? A popular gentleman goes down and burns the Town Hall, and you are told that that act, whether military or not, is not justiciable.

The Master of the Rolls—The question arises in this case—to use a classic phrase—whether there is war, or only a sort of war.

Lord Justice Ronan—When war is raging the ordinary tribunals cannot deal with the acts of the military.

Lord Justice O'Connor—The doctrine, salus populi suprema lex, comes into the consideration of the case.

Mr. Healy—That is a tag used by persons engaged in perpetrating injustice.

Mr. Babington, K.C.—The phrase is used in the De Keyser case, which has been quoted by Mr. Healy.

Lord Justice O'Connor—You admit that a state of war exists.

Mr. Healy—Yes, but it is a different thing when you are dealing with property.

At the conclusion of Mr. Healy's address, Mr. Lynch followed on the same side.

Lord Chief Justice Ronan suggested that in lieu of the order to stay proceedings the action might be dismissed without prejudice to the right of the parties to bring the action after the termination of the "war."

Mr. Babington said that he had no objection to that. If this action were to go on the military would be constantly attacked for every act done by them.

The Master of the Rolls intimated that as at present advised the Court did not consider it necessary to hear counsel for the Crown. The case was one of such importance that they thought it necessary to state their reasons for the judgment which they would give. If, however, they changed their minds before delivering judgment they would give notice to counsel for the Crown.

Mr. Healy, K.C.; Mr. P. Lynch, K.C., and Mr. John O'Byrne (instructed by Messrs. James O'Connor and Co.) appeared for the appellant. Mr. Babinson, K.C.; Mr. E. S. Murphy, K.C., and Mr. Lipsett (instructed by the Chief Crown Solicitor) appeared for the defendant.

ACTION AGAINST DUBLIN FIRM.—In the King's Bench Division, before Mr. Justice Pim, in the action brought by Jorgensen and Co., against George Perry and Co., Ltd., Dublin, Mr. Lardner, with whom was Mr. Carrigan, K.C. (instructed by Mr. E. F. Collins), for the defendants, applied for an order restraining the plaintiffs from drawing out of court money which the defendants had lodged with their defence. The action was brought to recover a balance alleged to be due for freight of a cargo of timber brought to Dublin by a vessel owned by the plaintiffs, who are a Danish firm. The defendants alleged short delivery, and they have brought a counter-claim for a larger sum than the sum claimed by the plaintiffs. They desired that the plaintiffs should not be allowed to draw out the money pending the trial. Mr. Justice Pim made the order asked for. Mr. E. A. Collins, with whom was Mr. McGonigal, K.C. (instructed by Messrs. Casey, Clay and Collins) appeared for the plaintiffs.

ACTION FOR MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.—At Nisi Prius, before Mr. Justice Samuels and a city common jury, the case of Healy v. Healy stood on the list. It was an action to recover £1,000 damages for alleged malicious prosecution, the plaintiff being Bridget Healy, of Montague street, and the defendant, Robert Healy, of Mountain View, N.C.R., Dublin. The case arose out of a charge of larceny of a cheque and of a gold ring, which had been dismissed before Mr. Cooper, K.C., Divisional Magistrate. Mr. Gibson, K.C., who, with Mr. Swayne, K.C., and Mr. Devitt (instructed by Mr. James Fagan) appeared for the plaintiff, said the Court would not be troubled with the case, as a settlement had been arrived at by consent. Mr. J. McGonigal, K.C.; Mr. McElligot, K.C., and Mr. Stephen O'Brien (instructed by Messrs. Cochrane and Co.) appeared for the defendant. The consent—the terms of which were not mentioned—was made a rule of Court.

LONDONDERRY POSSESSION CASE.—The hearing was concluded, before the Lord Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Gordon, and Mr. Justice Moore, of the case of Robinson v. Henderson, in the King's Bench Division. It was an appeal by way of "case stated" from a decree of the Recorder of Londonderry, made on 4th February last for the recovery of possession of a dwellinghouse known as Cul-Eden, on the Northland road, Londonderry, of which the plaintiff, a solicitor, was landlord. The case was stated by Lord Justice Ronan, before whom the appeal came on for hearing at the Londonderry Assizes. The plaintiff, it appeared, served notice to quit on the defendant, who had held the house for about twelve years as a quarterly tenant at £7 10/- per quarter, the poor law valuation being £26, and the notice was to expire on 1st February, 1920, but no proceedings were taken upon it for possession. On July 31st, 1920, the defendant was served with a fresh notice to quit on 1st November, and with a notice under the Increase of Rent Act, 1920, the ejectment proceedings being brought on 20th November, last. The first question in the case was—whether there was a valid notice to quit, it being contended on behalf of the defendant that the joint effect of the two notices was not an absolute notice to quit, but merely a notice conditional on the defendant declining to pay the increased rent under the Act, which, it was alleged, he was willing to pay. On the other hand, it was contended that the notice was absolute, and that it could safely have been acted upon. The plaintiff, who was obliged to travel from Castlerock to Derry to business, a distance of about 30 miles, wanted Cul-Eden as a residence for himself, making the house in Templemore Park the residence of his mother. The main question in the case was, whether Cul-Eden was "reasonably required" by the plaintiff as a residence for himself, within the meaning of the Act. The Court now were unanimously of opinion that the house was so reasonably required by the plaintiff, and held that there was a valid and effective notice to quit. The decree for possession was accordingly affirmed, with twelve guineas costs. Mr. Chadwick, with whom was Mr. E. S. Murphy, K.C. (instructed by Messrs. Caldwell and Robinson) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Lipsett, with whom was Mr. Babington, K.C. (instructed by Mr. Andrew Robb) for the defendant.

COMPENSATION AWARDS.

CLAIMS BY THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

In Green street Courthouse yesterday the Recorder of Dublin made the following awards in claims for compensation made by the Postmaster-General for damage done during the last few months to telephone and telegraph apparatus in various sub-offices in Dublin and district:—

Drumcondra Telephone Exchange, raided on 19th March, £35 5s. 4d.

Churchtown, Dundrum, Co. Dublin, 2nd May, £29 8s. 11d.

Drumcondra Exchange, 21st March, £1 8s. 6d.

Grand Canal quay Exchange, 28th April, £35 1s. 3d.

Kingsbridge Railway Signal Station, 3rd May, £25 18s. 2d.

Damage to wires at British and Irish Steam Packet Co.'s premises, North Wall, by fire on 5th May, £3 7s. 9d.

Drumcondra Exchange, 28th March, £50 6s.

In giving evidence in one case a Post Office witness stated that part of the claim was for 120 hours of workmen's time.

The Recorder—For men on the permanent staff? Yes.

And are the unfortunate ratepayers of the city to pay for them? They had to be paid for these 120 hours; they would have been at some other work otherwise.

Costs in the various cases were measured at from three to five guineas.

His lordship commented on the fact that the burden on the ratepayers was being increased to an intolerable extent, and that he was receiving no assistance from the public bodies to lessen it. Rathmines Urban Council was the only public body officially represented.

Mr. Kenneth Dockrell (instructed by Messrs. Gerald Byrne and Co.) appeared on behalf of the Postmaster-General.

UPPER SILESIAN PROBLEM.

The Echo de Paris states that in a fresh Note which reached the Quai D'Orsay on Monday the British Government confirms its intention not to reply to the last French Note until it is in receipt of the report of Sir Harold Stuart, the newly-appointed British Commissioner in Upper Silesia. On the other hand, says the paper, London maintains its first allegation regarding what it calls the attitude of the French troops towards the Poles. Meanwhile, continues the Echo de Paris, a state of open war is solidly being established in the plebiscite region, and it fears lest the fate of Upper Silesia should be decided by the forces now fighting there, adding that if in the end General Hoefer's troops are victorious only the most energetic action on the part of France on the right bank of the Rhine could, perhaps, alter the course of events.

KINGSTOWN Y.M.C.A.

On Thursday last, at the Kingstown Young Men's Christian Association, Corrig avenue, an interesting exhibition of weight-lifting and posing took place. The chair was taken by the Rev. B. R. Morton, a Vice-President, who opened the meeting with prayer, and in a suitable speech introduced Mr. W. R. MacPherson. Mr. MacPherson gave a most instructive lecture on the care of the body. During the collection (in aid of the Association) Mr. MacPherson greatly interested the audience with his feats of strength, and his posing was admired by all. At the conclusion of the performance, Mr. Thomas R. Potter, the General Secretary, in proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. MacPherson, and others who assisted him, said that Mr. MacPherson had given up the stage as a profession, and would tell the story of his conversion to Christ from Atheism. On Sunday night Mr. MacPherson related the story of his conversion to a crowded meeting. He based his address on the text "The Lord is my strength and song, and is become my salvation." Miss Temple, of Dublin, sang a solo with distinction.

THE AMERICAN MARKETS.

STOCKS CLOSED STEADY.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

NEW YORK, TUESDAY.

Stocks opened heavy, widespread liquidation and short selling causing numerous new low records. Stocks were forced upon the market through the inability of traders to meet "margin" calls, the prevailing high money rates, and more dividend and motor cuts. Louisville and Nashville broke 9½ and Atlantic Coast Line 7⅞; but other Railroads were comparatively steady. Oils, Steels, Sugars, Utilities, Motors, Rubbers, Equipments, Shippings, Papers, and Industrial Alcohol lost 1 to 6 points. European Oils, however, were sustained throughout. The market in the late dealings rallied 1 to 2 points on covering and the advance in sterling exchange, and closed steady.

ENGINEERING TRADE DISPUTE.

DR. MACNAMARA MEETS THE WORKERS.

Notices of the proposed reduction of wages were posted by the employers in the engineering workshops throughout the United Kingdom to-day.

Dr. Macnamara, Labour Minister, yesterday received representatives of the men, and discussed the position created by the break-down of the negotiations with the employers.

At the close of the interview, Mr. J. T. Brownlie, Chairman of the men's side, stated that Dr. Macnamara had undertaken to submit the salient points to the employers again.

DUBLIN POSTAL ARRANGEMENTS

With reference to the new postal arrangements, which come into operation from the end of the present week, we are asked to say that, contrary to the statement published yesterday, there will be a general collection of letters in Dublin about 7.30 on Sunday evenings.

The special express letter service on Saturday night and Sunday, for which a charge of 1s., plus the ordinary postal charge, will be made, will operate only between the cities of Dublin, Belfast, London, Edinburgh, Liverpool, Manchester, Glasgow, Leeds, Sheffield, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Birmingham, Bristol, and Cardiff.

A LIFE ON THE VELD.

Particulars of small farms which are available in the Eastern Province of Cape Colony can be obtained from Lieutenant-Colonel M. M. Hartigan, C.M.G., D.S.O., "Deciduous Department," 48 Dover street, W. 1. These farms are cleared and cultivated, with two-thirds already established under Lucerne, giving an immediate return to the settler. Fruit trees will be planted according to the wishes of the purchaser. There is a ready market for apricots, peaches, almonds, pears, and apples. Expert assistance is given free of charge to obviate any handicap due to lack of experience. A main line of railway runs through the Estates, which are watered by a Government irrigation scheme. The climatic conditions are ideal, and the settler would have congenial neighbours, good schools, and an assured income for life. The capital required is from £2,000 to £3,000.—(Advt.)

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

LONG DISTANCE VIEWS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In reply to my friendly critic "Sleibteanach," while I do not wonder at his incredulity, I would suggest that he should read my letter more carefully, when he would see that his proposed identification of the distant peaks in the south-west with the Galtee Mountains will not hold, since this range was extraordinarily clear and quite unmistakable (I have often seen them), and the other heights were a mere wavy line on the horizon, almost in a line with Galteemore, but looking nearly twice as far off.

There is no doubt, of course, that on the occasion referred to we were favoured with quite abnormal conditions, and some unusual effect of refraction would account for the distances seen. That such a unique opportunity for seeing long distances should come when we happened to be on such a viewpoint as the summit of Lugnacullia is one of those happy chances for which I have never ceased to be grateful.—Yours, etc.,

W. H. T. GAHAN.

The Rectory, Gorey, June 7th, 1921.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—On reading Mr. Gahan's letter I envied him his good fortune. I have been to Lugnaquilla, but could penetrate the mists no farther than Bray Head. I should like to believe it possible really to see the Reeks from Lugnaquilla, and should congratulate the person who should be so fortunate; but is it possible? It is only with reluctance that I question Mr. Gahan's statements. I make out the distance between Lugnaquilla and Carrantuohill as 155 miles. A straight line joining them would pass just east of the main railway line at Limerick Junction. Ordnance Survey maps give the surface level at this place as 400 feet above sea level. This is equivalent to reducing the altitude of each mountain by 400 feet. Allowing for refraction, the maximum distances of vision from Lugnaquilla and Carrantuohill, respectively, are 72⅝ and 77⅝ miles. These two, added, make only 150¼ miles, or five miles short of the actual distance between the heights. A straight line joining Lugnaquilla and Nephin would pass through Lackan, in County Roscommon, where the surface level is 392 feet above sea level. The total distance is 147 miles. Calculating, as before, the maximum ranges of vision would be 72⅝ and 67¼, respectively, equal to 140 miles, or seven miles short of the total distance.

What Mr. Gahan may have mistaken for the Kerry Mountains were the Ballyhoura Mountains on the borders of Cork and Limerick, between Charleville and Mitchelstown. The contour of those mountains resembles the Reeks somewhat, if viewed from the north-east. And what he may have mistaken for Nephin was Slievebawn, near Strokestown. Both these mountains are about 100 miles to 110 miles from Lugnaquilla. The Sperrin Mountains could, under favourable weather conditions, be just discerned as a faint line of heights, but very faint.—Yours, etc.,

J. ABRAHAM.

Cahir, June 6th, 1921.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—As some of your readers have expressed doubts whether the mountains which Mr. Gahan saw in the south-west were really the Reeks of Kerry, permit me to give the following facts. From the summit of Fossey Hill—which does not aspire to the dignity of a mountain—to the south-east of Timahoe, Queen's County, when atmospheric conditions are favourable—perhaps, half a dozen times in the year—the dark peaks of the Reeks, jutting above the south-western horizon, are clearly discernible. There is no danger of confusing them with the Galtees, which show up perceptibly nearer and more distinct, and well clear of the line of vision—Fossey and Reeks. As this hill is, perhaps, not half the height of Lugnacullia, and as the latter is only about forty miles as the crow flies to the north-east, and almost always in view, it is quite within the range of possibility that, under similar conditions, the Reeks would be clearly visible from the height of the Wicklow Mountains. This remarkable visibility always portends rain within twenty-four hours.—Yours, etc.,

FISHING LICENCE DUTIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—May I call attention to the efforts which are being made by our Boards of Conservators to secure the extinction of all industrial salmon fishing in the selfish interests of their sport? They are well aware that this would be the effect of doubling the licence duties, as they propose, the rate being already well nigh prohibitive. It is inconceivable that these gentlemen should consider it "playing the game" to take advantage of the fact that only their side has now any representation in the English Parliament to rush through a measure which, they are well aware, would have no chance of passing if our people were represented.

The matter is distinctly one for the Irish Parliament; reasons urged for seeking to include it in the English bill are mere subterfuges. Nothing can obscure the fact that the result of this attempt, if successful, would be to take the bread out of the mouths of large numbers of deserving fishermen in the selfish interests of a number of sportsmen.—Yours, etc.,

CHARGE OF BIGAMY.

James Graham (28), described as of no occupation, living at 11 Speldhurst road, South Hackney, London, was charged on remand at West Ham yesterday with committing bigamy.

The accused a week ago went into West Ham Police Station and made a statement to Detective Inspector Taylor which led to the charge. The two women concerned were now called.

Frances May Graham, of 11 Speldhurst road, South Hackney, said that on March 17th, 1917, she married the prisoner at the Hackney Registry Office. He was then a soldier, and she drew a separation allowance until August, 1917, when her husband got a commission. He left her last October, but had sent her some money since.

Sarah Leahy, who now lives at 10 Wye Crescent, Chepstow, Mon., said that she went through the ceremony of marriage with the prisoner at the parish church at Tralee on April 14th, 1920. He was then a member of the Royal Irish Constabulary, from which he had since resigned. He had described himself as a bachelor, and had lived with her until a fortnight ago.

The prisoner, who suggested that the case might be at once settled, was sent for trial to the Central Criminal Court.

IRISH RAINFALL ASSOCIATION.

REPORT FOR MAY, 1921.

May was another dry month, with considerable variation of temperature. On the whole, it was cool, but there was some very warm weather, notably on the 1st, and again round the 25th. Ground frosts were numerous for the season, and there was some hail. The total rainfall for the month was:—

MARKETING OF EARLY POTATOES

IRISH CROP PROSPECTS.

Reports received by the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland indicate that, notwithstanding the late frosts, the potato crop is in a forward condition. Digging is expected to commence about the middle of June. Probably about 4,000 tons, consisting principally of British Queen, Epicure, Ninetyfold, and May Queen, will be available for market. Some of the growers have already arranged for disposal of the crop.

RACECOURSE GLEANINGS.

EXCEL'S SMART DISPLAY.

(SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED.)

BIRMINGHAM, TUESDAY.

Despite industrial troubles and no railway facilities, the Birmingham Executive has held few more successful summer meetings.

Walter Earl, the ex-steeplechase jockey, has not much material at his command for winning races, but he is meeting with a fair share of success with his small string. To-day he saddled Marval to win the Tamworth Selling Plate in the colours of another ex-jockey, Walter Griggs, for though the latter has a training establishment of his own, he had entrusted the care of Marval to his friend. Griggs had no desire to retain his winner, who is only a moderate horse, but may be capable of winning races in Belgium, where, I understand, he goes, his new owner being Mr. Van der Ven.

After his Derby efforts, it was not to be expected that Alan Breck would turn out for the Midland Breeders' Foal Stakes. With three successive wins to his credit, Volunteer was fully expected to add to the score. He claimed a 6lb. breeding allowance, but was still set far too big a task. In the straight he put up a flattering display, and promised to get up, but then as quickly slackened his effort, and Endor, who had made every yard of the running, just succeeded in staying on long enough to resist Speculator's strong finishing effort by a short head. Volunteer had earlier beaten Endor over the course, but there was now a difference of 31lb. in the weights. Broxa gave a disappointing display, and is, it is to be feared, an overrated colt.

Excel, who had swerved and been unluckily beaten by Furry Dance at Salisbury, was not set a very great task in the Guernsey Stud Produce Stakes. She is a particularly handsome black daughter of Stedfast, whom she much resembles, and half sister to Mount William. Thanks to an exceedingly well-judged display of horsemanship by Gardner, she scored in smart style.

BOXING.

LEONARD-KANSAS FIGHT.

A New York telegram, dated Monday, states:—In a 12-round boxing contest held at Harrison, New Jersey, to-night, Benny Leonard successfully defended the light-weight title by defeating Rocky Kansas on points. The champion gave a clean display. Few hard or telling blows were struck. It was more in the nature of a boxing exhibition, in which Benny Leonard proved to be the best man. Rocky Kansas tried to follow aggressive tactics, but in nearly every round Leonard's snappy lefts to the face and rights to the jaw, together with the latter's superior footwork, greatly counterbalanced his aggressiveness.

GOLF.

BARTON CUP.

PORTMARNOCK v. CLONTARF.

The following team will represent Portmarnock to-day:—Reid and Moore, Burney and Dawson, Grove White and O'Brien, at Clontarf; Wilkinson and Lloyd, Dorgan and Charlton, at Portmarnock, five o'clock.

INTERESTING MIXED FOURBALL MATCH AT HERMITAGE.

The following ladies have been selected to play on Saturday next in a fourball team match against a men's team, on arrival of 1.30 tram from Parkgate street:—Miss Jackson and Mrs. Medill, Mrs. Barr and Mrs. M'Intyre, Mrs. Knox and Miss Armstrong, Mrs. Gotto and Mrs. McEntaggart, Mrs. Roche and Miss J. M'Cowen, Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Babington. Any of the above if unable to play are requested to communicate immediately with Miss Jackson. 'Phone 1519.

£1,000 PROFESSIONAL TOURNAMENT.

The £1,000 professional tournament opened at Gleneagles, Perthshire, yesterday, when the entire field played 27 holes by strokes, and will do the same to-day. The top sixteen players go into the match play series. A touch of novelty was lent to the proceedings by each player wearing a numbered disc, and another feature was that the American competitors played in their shirt-sleeves, though to no practical purpose, as none of them did unduly well. Each player did 18 holes in the King's course and 9 holes in the Queen's course. Though the tropical conditions tended to favour the American players, only one, Jock Hutchison, the present professional champion of the United States and a Scotsman by birth, looks safe for the competition in the match play stages, while Walter Hagen, a former United States open champion, and Tom Kerrigan are respectively 10 and 11 strokes behind Ted Ray.

IRISH PLAYERS FAIL.

Ireland was represented by four players. The best golf was displayed by Hugh McNeill, the big Portrush representative. His shots up to the green were perfectly played, but his work with his putter let him down badly. He had a couple of 38's on the King's Course, and, with a like figure on the 9-hole course, this gave him an aggregate for the day of 114. Melville Brown (Malone) had a disastrous day, being completely off his game. He took 47 for the short course, and 94 for the King's Course, giving him an aggregate of 141. Charlie Pope (Fortwilliam) was not at his best, and during his 27 holes he was repeatedly in the bracken. In his round over the King's Course he totalled 81, while over the short course he returned in 38, aggregating 119. J. Shannon (Portmarnock) played steadily for a round of 38 on the Queen's Course. He did not start too well on the King's Course, and, opening with a 7, this seemed to unnerve him, and he had two 45's for the round of 90, with an aggregate of 128.

DUBLIN NEWSPAPERS' G.S.—The competition for captain's (Sir James C. Percy) and other prizes will be held at Delgany (by kind permission of the club) on Saturday, 25th inst. Entries close with Mr. J. CRICKET.

ESSEX v. SURREY.

An hour and a half's cricket at Leyton yesterday was sufficient to give Surrey an easy victory by an innings and 32 runs. Essex were 126 behind, with four wickets in hand, when the game was resumed in brilliant weather. Dixon soon left, but Freeman found a good partner in Morris, the pair adding 50 for the eighth wicket. Freeman carried on with his hopeless task in plucky fashion, and was last out for a very good innings of 102. Surrey's fielding was not of the best, several catches being dropped. Score:—

	1st Inns.	2nd Inns.
Essex	104	344
Surrey	480	—

HAMPSHIRE v. SOMERSETSHIRE.

Hampshire had no difficulty in gaining an eight wickets victory at Southampton yesterday over Somersetshire, who were in a hopeless position overnight. Score:—

	1st Inns.	2nd Inns.
Somerset	165	228
Hampshire	351	44 (2 wkts).

LEICESTERSHIRE v. LANCASHIRE.

At Leicester yesterday the Northern county gained a heavy victory over Leicester, winning the match shortly after lunch by 284 runs. At one time there was a probability of the concluding stage providing an interesting finish, but the home batsman proved quite incapable of rising to the occasion. Score:—

	1st Inns.	2nd Inns.
Lancashire	278	*264 (9 wkts.)
Leicestershire	191	67

*Declared.

NOTTINGHAM v. SUSSEX.

ARMAGH ROYAL SCHOOL 2nd v. ROYAL A.I. 2nd.

BILLIARDS.

INMAN v. SMITH.

At the resumption in Glasgow yesterday afternoon of this match of 16,000 up level, the Londoner failed to add to an unfinished 14, and the play ruled slow. The best breaks were 105, 53, 68, 115, and 52, by Inman; and 121 and 156 by Smith. When the game was called both were behind their points. Interval scores:—Inman, 1,865; Smith, 901.

FARROW'S BANK CASE.

Farrow's Bank trial was resumed at the Old Bailey, London, yesterday.

Called for the prosecution, Henry S. Keogh, joint manager of the bank's head office, Cheapside, said that he could find no statement in the pamphlet issued by the bank that the bank was prosperous and solvent.

The Northern Parliament.

The enrolment of the first Parliament of Northern Ireland marks a turning-point in the nation's history. We print a full report of yesterday's ceremonies at Belfast. It is impossible, perhaps, for any Southern Irishman to take a wholly impartial view of them; but no intelligent Irishman who is not blinded by passion or prejudice can fail to appreciate their significance. Northern Ulster has accepted the Government of Ireland Act and intends to make the best of it, even as she made the best of the Act of Union. Those who know her character will not be deceived by the lack of public enthusiasm or rejoicing in Belfast yesterday. She does not rejoice at her breach with the old order; she realises all the difficulties and hazards of the new; and, therefore, she approaches her task in the earnest and solemn spirit in which men approach the critical adventures of life. The opening ceremonial was simple and dignified. The new Parliament, starting without traditions, has decided to take the ancient Parliament at Westminster as its model. Already the Prime Minister, Sir James Craig, has chosen the chief members of his Government, and, consensu omnium, the Parliament has been fortunate in the choice of its first Speaker, Major the Honourable Robert O'Neill. In his speech at the luncheon Sir James Craig revealed a temper of sober courage which, if it cannot assure success, is a guarantee that success will not be undeserved. He does not ignore the temporary problems of industrial depression that may embarrass the first footsteps of the infant State. The new Viceroy made his first public appearance yesterday and impressed the North, as we think that his words will impress the South, with his sincere desire to help Ireland. We welcome him as a friend of peace and settlement who has faith in the national destiny. His Excellency went to Belfast as forerunner of the King, who, a fortnight hence, will preside at the formal opening of the Northern Parliament.

We observe in the Nationalist Press a tendency to belittle the Northern Parliament, to predict its speedy failure, to talk almost as if its existence could be ignored. This is a foolish attitude for three reasons. In the first place, the methods of Christian Science are inapplicable to politics. You cannot get rid of unloved facts by pretending that they are not there, and the Northern Parliament is a fait accompli of the most solid kind. For better or worse its smallest responsibility—even if great developments occur in the near or further future—will be the full control of the local affairs of six Irish counties. In the next place, the Northern Parliament is an Irish institution. Southern Irishmen were entitled to resist its creation; but now that it has been established beyond their powers of destruction, they ought to desire its welfare. It is, after all, an experiment in self-government, and the South has been protesting for a hundred years that Irishmen are fit to govern themselves. The North has decided that it can govern itself under the new Act. Southern Irishmen, however sceptical of that confidence, can have no patriotic reason for wishing the experiment a failure. Its success will be not merely a Northern, but a national, asset. Moreover, the fortunes of a great body of Nationalist and Roman Catholic Irishmen are affected by this new Parliament. If it is a good Parliament, they will prosper; if it is a bad Parliament, they will suffer. We suggest, too, that it is foolish to suppose that the exceedingly shrewd leaders of a very hard-headed community really have sat down to build a tower without counting the cost. They may be wrong in thinking that they can make their State successful within the financial and other limitations of the Act; but the South owes to their records as business men the bare justice of suspending her verdict. In any case, when they have proved in practice that the Act needs amendment it is certain that amendment will not be refused. The Lord Lieutenant indicated yesterday that it may be granted "in the not very far distant future."

The third reason that should prevent Southern Ireland from ignoring or denouncing the Northern Parliament is the most cogent of all. Through its portals lies the only approach to the goal of a peaceful and united Ireland. If we want unity, but reject the tardy processes of the new Act, we must convince the Northern Parliament that some other process is desirable and safe. The Southern Irishman who refuses to recognise that fact may remain a patriot, but cannot pretend to be a statesman. For many years Irish Nationalism has carried its case to the Imperial Parliament at Westminster. Henceforward it must carry that case to the Northern Parliament at Belfast. This is, perhaps, the most radical change in the whole history of Irish politics, and it is a change that no wise Irishman need regret. The business, if and when we get to business, will be transacted between men who have a common country, the same material interests, and that knowledge of one another's strength and weakness that smoothes the path of compromise. After yesterday the South must deal directly with the Northern Government and must employ methods that will appeal to the Northern heart and to the Northern brain. The employment of methods that shock the one and repel the other will be, henceforward, political insanity. That fact is the political condemnation, as its wickedness is the moral condemnation, of the campaign of crime. The Lord Lieutenant says that Ireland has no right to prosper so long as the sin of murder prevails. In the terms of politics these words mean that, so long as murder prevails, no settlement that would bring peace to Ireland can be attained. The future lies now in the hands of Northern and Southern statesmanship, and all good Irishmen must pray that the Northern Parliament will play a brave and worthy part in the making of it.

The Cattle Embargo.

Yesterday Sir Arthur Griffith-Boscawen received a deputation from the Londonderry Harbour Commissioners, the Ulster Farmers' Union, and the North of Ireland Horse-Breeders' Association, and heard some plain truths about the losses that his department's ridiculous policy has caused to this country. Because a single outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease has occurred in a remote district the Irish cattle trade has been virtually strangled. The "concessions" which were granted recently are almost worthless. A few cattle are allowed to enter the English markets after they have been in quarantine for the stipulated period; but the restrictions make it impossible for dealers to conduct their trade at a profit. There is no reason why the conditions should have been made so severe. The outbreak was reported to the Department of Agriculture by the owner of the infected animals, and before twelve hours had elapsed steps had been taken to prevent the disease from spreading. The animals were slaughtered and the movement of cattle within a wide area was prohibited. These measures, and the official assurance that the rest of the country had a clean bill of health, ought to have met the case. The English authorities, however, insisted upon treating the whole of Ireland as a hot-bed of foot-and-mouth disease. Their action was quite indefensible and the deputation was not guilty of exaggeration in describing it as "a gross injustice." The deputation pleaded the cause of the producers, graziers, and shippers of Ulster, and demanded that, so far as they are concerned, the embargo should be raised. It pointed out that many years had elapsed since a case of foot-and-mouth disease had occurred in the Northern counties and that there was no sound reason why the shipment of cattle from Londonderry and Belfast should be suspended. The same arguments apply to vast areas in the South and West, and it is to be hoped that the Minister of Agriculture will not overlook that fact when he considers his decision. In some quarters it is believed that the extraordinary treatment that has been meted out to the Irish cattle trade has been inspired by interests that advocate the removal of the embargo on Canadian store cattle. The Irish case for the retention of that embargo was stated with admirable clearness by Mr. T. P. Gill at Monday's sitting of the Royal Commission and by Colonel O'Callaghan-Westropp at yesterday's session. Mr. Gill showed that, if Canadian stores were admitted, there would be an immediate reduction in the number of home-bred stores. Consequently, if for any reason it became necessary to re-impose the restrictions on the import of Canadian animals, the British public would be left without adequate supplies of meat. In effect, the removal of the embargo would increase Britain's dependence upon sea-borne supplies. The folly of that course was demonstrated during the war, and it is hard to believe that the Commission will recommend the Government to adopt it.

Rhodes.

The latest recruit to the ranks of political discontent is the Island of Rhodes. Ever since the dawn of history nations have fought for the favours of this lovely isle, and it has been very fickle in their distribution. In the course of its life it has been allied with, or conquered by, Athens, Sparta, Macedonia, Persia, Rome, the Saracens, and the Byzantine Empire, while in the sixteenth century it was wrested by the Ottomans from the Knights of St. John under Villiers de Lisle Adam. For nearly four hundred years it remained in Turkish hands, and after the Peace Conference its administration was entrusted to Italy for a period of fifteen years. At the end of that time it was to be ceded, under certain conditions, to Greece. Now the Greeks are beginning to chafe at the delay and are protesting loudly against the continuance of the Italian régime. They accuse the Italians, as is their wont, with all sorts of crimes and atrocities, and demand the island for themselves. In view of the fact that the whole problem of the Near East is about to be re-opened, the squabble over the island gains importance. Italy's interests clash with Greek ambitions at every turn, and it is high time that disputes such as that about Rhodes should be settled, and once for all. Undoubtedly, the Italians have treated the Greeks on the island with some severity; but, on the other hand, they have done much already to develop its resources by the improvement of its communications. The Greeks seem to have quite enough territory to occupy their attention, and to add Rhodes to their responsibilities would be fair neither to the Rhodians nor to themselves.

Cloud-Bursts.

During the last five days enormous damage has been caused in different parts of the world by cloud-bursts. In Colorado the town of Pueblo has been destroyed and at least two hundred and fifty persons have lost their lives. At about 5 o'clock last Friday evening, two hours after a cloud-burst had been reported from Swallows, fifteen miles to the west, the waters of the Arkansas River rose suddenly and swept away bridges, houses, and railway trains. In a few minutes the floods reached the second floors in the houses that remained standing. On Monday a cloud-burst occurred at Lille causing damage estimated at a million francs; and telegrams from Vienna say that on the same day there was sudden and serious flooding in Lower and Upper Austria and Styria. The London Press is canvassing the question whether these violent disturbances are due to the influence of the sun. Once more the spot which shows that a vast solar convulsion is in progress is visible. The Director of the Meteorological Department in London holds that "sunspots have nothing to do with these upheavals." Lord Kelvin once made a calculation of the energy involved and, as a result, dismissed the view that the earth could be affected by solar convulsions of which sunspots are a symptom. His figures, however, have been disputed. Certainly it is a curious coincidence that the storms should occur when the sunspot becomes visible.

PROTECTION OF PROPERTY IN IRELAND.

EMPLOYMENT OF SPECIAL CONSTABLES.

The Ministry of Transport announced in the London Gazette last night that, in pursuance of the provisions contained in the Ministry of Transport Act, 1919, it is proposed to submit to His Majesty in Council an Order, under the title, "The Ministry of Transport (Lord Lieutenant of Ireland Re-transfer of Certain Powers) Order, 1921," whereby the powers and duties conferred on the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland by the Special Constables (Ireland) Act, 1845, with respect to the appointment, employment, reduction, and removal of additional constables for keeping the peace near the works of any railway, canal, or other public work of a similar nature, and with respect to the expenses of such additional constables, will be re-transferred from the Ministry of Transport to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, as from the date of such Order.

ST. GEORGE'S WESTMINSTER ELECTION.

Polling took place yesterday in the St. George's Westminster by-election. The result was declared last night as follows:—

Mr. J. M. Erskine (U. Anti-Waste)	7244
Col. Sir Herbert Jessel (Co.U.)	5356
Majority	1888

Ireland, N.W.—Wind south-westerly, moderate to fresh, dull, some rain; visibility fair, but some coast fog; moderate temperature.

Ireland, N.E., S.E., and S.W.—Wind south-westerly to westerly, light or moderate; fair early, less fair later; visibility mainly good; less warm than of late.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
TUESDAY NIGHT.

The coal-owners and miners were in conference again all the morning, and after two and a half hours' talk broke up so that each party might discuss the position separately. This does not mean that the discussions were broken off, though there are no arrangements for a further meeting. When each side has arrived at certain conclusions another meeting will take place. The discussion this morning is reported to have been full and friendly, so that the situation may be regarded as hopeful. Time, however, is rapidly passing, and the ten million pounds offer has only a few days longer to run.

The two great industrial disputes now threatened on the part of the cotton workers and the engineers are a staggering blow to the Labour leaders, for they recognise that the trade union movement will be severely injured if these disputes develop into conflicts like the coal strike. Trade unions are fast becoming bankrupt, and it is known that some of the unions are losing members at such a rate that they are feeling the effect financially. In fact, the Labour world would be greatly pleased if there could be a long period of industrial peace; otherwise the Labour movement threatens to become overwhelmed.

The East End of London is making great preparations to show its last tribute of respect to Mr. Crooks. The body will be removed from the modest home in Gough street, Poplar, on Wednesday evening to All Saints' Church, where Vespers of the dead will be sung. The Funeral Service on Thursday will be taken by the Bishop of Chelmsford. Mr. Crooks having been a Privy Councillor, it is certain that the King and Queen will be specially represented, while many members of the House of Commons will go down to Poplar for the funeral. After the Church Service there is to be a great procession to the cemetery, about a mile distant, and in this all the local, municipal, Labour, and other bodies will take part, with the Mayor of Poplar, Mr. George Lansbury, at the head.

Members of Parliament were very glad to hear from the Speaker this afternoon that he had decided to relax the present restriction on the admission of strangers to the extent of permitting the wives of members to occupy the Ladies' Gallery. There is no doubt that the absence of strangers has a rather depressing effect upon the proceedings of the House and that the re-opening of the Ladies' Gallery, even to this limited degree, will help to enliven them.

The debate on the second reading of the Key Industries Bill was resumed by Mr. L. Terrell, who was hailed by Sir Godfrey Collins as being the real father of the child. The hon. member for Chippenham has, indeed, hammered at the necessity for a measure of this kind for many months past, and he justified his attitude this evening, not as a Tariff Reformer, but as an advocate for industrial rehabilitation. Trade was at present going to the dogs, and it was, he urged, no good waiting for the Labour Party's ideal of an International Industrial Commonwealth. As to the opposition to the Bill, it was entirely artificial and unsupported by any considerable body of the trading opinion of the country.

Sir Godfrey Collins's grievance against the Government was that, by introducing this Bill, they had, in fact, made an admission of lack of confidence in the ability of British enterprise to face competition. Modified support for the measure was forthcoming from Sir A. Williamson.

Mr. Fisher, the Minister for Education, lamented the necessity for the Government to interfere with trade and commerce. Under ordinary conditions the provisions of the Bill would have been regarded as touching the extreme limits of economic dementia, but the present situation was abnormal. He freely admitted that he had at first given a preference to the subsidising of "key" industries, but he had come to the conclusion that it was inadvisable, as involving a considerable charge on the Exchequer, and calling for close supervisions and control.

The debate on the second reading of the "Key" Industries Bill was brought to a close by the exercise of the closure, and the Bill read a second time by 312 to 92.

So extensive are the entries for the various classes at the International Horse Show, which is to remain open at Olympia from Saturday, the 18th, until Saturday, the 25th, that three sessions daily have been arranged. Naturally the most attractive programmes are fixed for the afternoons and evenings, the performances beginning at 2 and 7.30 each day, and there will be jumping over the course at every one of these sessions.

The gala performance will take place on Monday afternoon, June 20th, when the officers of seven nations will jump for the King George V. gold cup, a trophy at present held by Captain Aissardière, of France. Prior to the contest there will be a parade of officers in uniform and the judging of officers' light-weight chargers.

The Connaught challenge trophy, open to all officers serving in the Regular, Special Reserve, Territorial, and Overseas forces, will be decided on the Wednesday evening. This cup last year was won by Lieutenant-Colonel Geoffrey Brooke, 16th Lancers, who has again entered the lists. He rode Combined Training, the horse with which, when he held the rank of lieutenant, he was successful in 1914.

The Prince of Wales's Cup is to be competed for on Thursday afternoon, June 23rd. In 1914 Russia won outright with a third successive victory; the award was called the King Edward VII. Cup. Last year H.R.H. the Prince of Wales presented a new cup, which is held by Sweden.

British M.P.'s discussed with much interest the news of the meeting of Northern Ireland's new House of Commons and the formation of Sir James Craig's Government. That gentleman's appointment as Prime Minister vacates the seat for Mid-Down at Westminster, and several of his colleagues also vacate their seats here. Sir James is not expected in London again until the month of July, when he will be presented with the piece of plate which some hundreds of his Unionist friends in the Imperial House of Commons have subscribed for as a testimonial to him on his departure from among them.

A deputation of farmers, breeders, and dealers, and representatives of shipping interests, waited on the President of the Board of Agriculture to-day to press for the admission, at any rate, of store cattle from Ulster to Great Britain. The deputation was introduced by Captain Charles Craig, and was also supported by several other Ulster M.P.'s, and by Colonel Sir Alexander Sprot, who attended on behalf of Scottish "store" feeders. The President gave what his hearers regarded as a sympathetic reply, from which they gathered that he was anxious to remove all restrictions against Irish imports as early as possible. He did not, however, commit himself to any more definite undertaking than a promise to consider carefully the case laid before him. Mr. T. P. Gill, Secretary of the Irish Department of Agriculture, was present during the proceedings.

Sir Frederick Hall will ask Mr. Chamberlain to-morrow whether Captain-Lieutenant Neumann, who was charged with torpedoing the hospital ship, Dover Castle, was acquitted, partly on the ground that such action is justified in the case of a ship used for the conveyance of soldiers wounded in a land battle; and whether, in view of the gravity of the position which this decision creates by legalising such an act of inhumanity, the Government proposes to take steps for the question to be considered by the League of Nations with a view to an international agreement being come to on the subject.

BERGSON'S PHILOSOPHY.

RELATIONSHIP OF THE MIND AND BODY.

THE DONNELLAN LECTURES.

Yesterday afternoon, in the Regent House, Trinity College, Dublin, the Rev. Dr. Luce, F.T.C.D., delivered the third of the Donnellan lectures for 1921. The lecturer dealt with Bergson's theories of mind and body and his doctrine of pure perception.

Dr. Luce said that if materialism was right as to the relation between mind and body, the value of freedom was reduced almost to nothing. That proposition Bergson challenged in his work, "Matière et Mémoire," published in 1896, six years after his "Mind and Will." In those years Bergson had set himself to find out what pathology and physiology taught as to the relation between the physical and the moral. The problem of mind and body took shape for him in the problem of perception. He saw that mind was most accessible in the form of memory, and that memory becomes embodied in, and through, the senses. In particular he made a minute study of aphasia, which is mainly a dislocation of word memory. In the memory of words—their sight and sound—there was the vast problem of mind and body focussed to a point. The problem of perception might at first seem different from that of mind and body, but everyone wanted to know how mind stood with respect to body.

If they considered the character of sight or hearing, they would see that perception was a test case. If they could explain "how we see," the problem of inter-action would be solved. Pointing out a similar difficulty of explaining when vibration becomes hearing, the lecturer said that perception is the union of mind and body, and Bergson's method of solving it, like the question of free will, was again by intuition, though the application was much more complicated. Self-identification, with the act of perceiving, is harder to compass than with the act of willing. Both the idealist and realist methods set up a barrier between thought and perception; both make a clean cut between percipient and percipienda, and so they never touch concrete perception. Bergson rejects both methods and aims at studying the undivided psycho-physical of perceiving. That requires two successive acts of intuition—intuition on a higher plane, followed by intuition on a lower plane. One is a self-identification with the mind element—perception; the other a sympathy with the physical process of perceiving. The two efforts of immediate apprehension formed the main pillars of Bergson's theory of perception. Taking first the lower plane, Bergson supposes the mental element eliminated, and tries to imagine experience as a tabula rasa confronted with an instantaneous perception.

PHYSICAL BASIS OF PERCEPTION.

That is the setting of what he calls pure perception. In the case of sight, if one could for a moment become all eyes, he would have lowered himself to the level of pure visual perception. The position is that the eye is a just body among other bodies, and fails to realise that they had to pass a self-denying ordinance to forget their supposed superiority to the inanimate objects around, and imagine how men and things would look, say, to a Martian. Bergson's meaning is plain—that the body forms part of the universal inter-action.

In that give-and-take between things, Bergson found the physical basis of perception. Two factors to be considered were life and mind. In the case of vision, organic perception differed from physical contact and impact. Why was it in the animate world that some bodies perceived more than others? Perception depends upon the efficiency of the nervous system, and in the animate world there seemed to be a scale of perception. The greater an organism's range of action, the more complex grew its percipient powers.

Discussing the part played by the nervous system in the process of perception, and the facts established by physiology, Dr. Luce said that one often met in the newspapers phrases such as chemical consciousness, nerve telegrams, but they were mere figures of speech, and very misleading. The apparent nerves no more bring information than do telegraph wires. What they bring to the brain is a subtle form of motion. The vibrations that come to the eye from a luminous body pass from the retina to the cerebrum, and are thence distributed through the system, but surely it was against the first principles of science to credit that movement with the power of originating anything so heterogeneous as a precept, thought, or feeling. Surrounding objects are continually acting on the body through the senses, and the body controlled by the cerebrum reacts upon them. The process as a whole is perception, which is, as it were, the loop between the brain and the object perceived. In Bergson's own words, perception is "the reflection upon surrounding objects of the action which those objects exert upon the body."

THE PROCESS OF PERCEPTION.

To ask why perception arises is to misconceive the problem. The instructive question rather is—"How does conscious perception arise?" Bergson finds the origin in the fact that we do not perceive all that is given. Conscious perception arises by diminution—i.e., by the selective process of the senses. It is discernment, as the etymology of the word signifies, a sifting of the given. Much of the action of surrounding objects upon the body had no concern for the individual. Only those qualities of the body which interest one, and to which the individual responds, are arrested by the nervous system, and formed the matter of conscious perception. For Bergson there was only a difference of degree between esse and percipio.

It might seem to some that Bergson had played into the hands of the materialist, but the truth is that he had stolen the weapons of the materialist, and used them against materialism. By showing that the stimulus without, and the nervous process within the body form one homogeneous movement, he compels them to recognise the presence of a different non-material factor. In the first part of his theory he has given for heuristic and polemical purposes an ideal genesis of perception. He insists, however, that this pure perception is not a fact of human experience. It is perception removed from the strain of duration, monetary perception; it represents an arrest of the pulse of life; it is a snapshot of an instant of perceiving.

NATURE AND FUNCTION OF MEMORY.

Dealing with the second part of Bergson's theory, Dr. Luce said that perception had, so far, been treated as instantaneous, but it is not. There is in it that which the finest physiology could not reveal. This other element is not obstruse or mysterious; to discover it they had only to place themselves en rapport with the act of perceiving what goes on besides the neural process. The memory aspect of this material factor appeals to Bergson. His is a philosophy of Time. To him memory is but the continuance of past time into the present, and it is, surely, true to say that there is no sight or sound, smell, taste, or touch, that does not strike at least a faint chord in the memory. A consistent materialism is bound to maintain that memory itself is a physical phenomenon. If one holds that perceptions are impressions on the brain one must also hold that memories are physical traces of past impressions. Bergson admits that, with injury to certain nerves, perception ceases and memory fails, but he denies that such facts offer any proof that thinking is only cerebration, or that the brain is a storehouse of memory.

Bergson's positive teaching regarding the nature and function of memory is that there are two memories—two psychic processes which cooperate, but since they are different modes of the reproduction of past time, they ought to be kept distinct. One he calls pure memory, the other actual memory. The former is concerned with the past, where experience, like a reversed cinema film, comes back on one, or the cumulative experience, floating free from the business of life. Actual experience is that which enters into concrete perceptions, and makes them what they are—recognition, and brings the past to bear on the present.

THE INDEPENDENCE OF THE MIND.

Summing up the value of Bergson's philosophy and its bearing on the larger issues of life, the lecturer said that it gives full value to the work of physiology and the kindred sciences, while it allowed full reality to the subject matter of psychology. Mind is not brain, nor is memory stored up protoplasm, or brain cells. Parallelism, too, is refuted. He shows that our mind life is wider than our brain life. Mind depends upon the body for its power of acting into space, but not for its being. Thought thinks in its own right, and cerebration need not be a permanent sine qua non of thinking. The Bergsonian theory thus supplants idealism in making mind the predominant partner in the psycho-physical being; but it is realist, too, for, according to it, real persons really perceive a real world.

The last lecture of the series will be given on Friday, at a quarter to four o'clock.

STEPS TO HELP RUSSIA.

Reuter's Correspondent in Antwerp telegraphed yesterday:—A Berlin telegram to the Neptune says that strong and important groups of German and British manufacturers and financiers have concluded an economic agreement with a view to reviving and reorganising Russian commerce, and affording important help to Russia. They will guarantee long and short term payments on Russia's behalf, and jointly exploit the great natural resources of that country. The Correspondent further professes to have learned that the British Government has authorised Lenin to proceed to London where he would personally discuss such questions as food and coal, and the transport problem that is such a vital one for Russia. The telegram adds that no confirmation of this latter report has been obtained. The British Government is supposed to have laid down two conditions—viz., that the Soviet Government should recognise Russia's debts and undertake to pay them by means of vast concessions, or by pledging the natural resources of Russia, and that it should guarantee to Russians who have left their country liberty to return home. The Correspondent ends by saying that a share in the new business scheme is reserved to Japan, but that strong opposition is anticipated on the part of France and America.

SPECIAL EXTRA.

FROM "THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY.

THE NORTHERN PARLIAMENT.

Commenting editorially upon the opening of the Ulster Parliament, The Times remarks:—Dark though the immediate Irish outlook is, the establishment of this Parliament is a long and irretraceable step in the right direction. The partition of Ireland has always been regarded as a distasteful expedient by those who believe, as we believe, that Irish peace can only be lasting if it is established upon the basis of Irish unity; but under the conditions that have prevailed since the Irish Convention it had become an essential preliminary to such union. In the Convention John Redmond made a statesman's bid for settlement by offering Irish Unionists a virtual equality of representation with the majority of their fellow-countrymen in a single Parliament. But he failed and since his death Sinn Fein has attempted to ignore the problem which he had sought to solve. Its leaders have consistently disregarded or made light of the strength and determination of Ulster. They have abandoned conciliation for threats, and sought to bend Ulster to their will by an economic boycott, applying to her that very coercion against which they have so loudly protested in their own case. By such methods they only succeeded in rendering partition inevitable. It was a policy foredoomed to disaster, for Sinn Feiners, like the party that preceded them in power, have no escape from the dilemma that a united Ireland is only possible if Southern Ireland be prepared to stand in a relationship to Great Britain which Ulster can accept. A faith well founded upon the unchangeable facts of the Irish situation can discern in yesterday's proceedings at Belfast the beginning of a process which, despite all obstacles, will ultimately achieve an Irish peace.

THE ALLIES AND SILESIA.

In a leading article The Times observes:—A week ago we pointed out the imminent danger of further fighting in Upper Silesia, and the deplorable possibilities which such an event might involve. They were clear. Everybody except the statesmen responsible for the peace of Europe foresaw them. Our Correspondent sees in it, as everybody who is not wilfully blind must see in it, the natural consequences of the policy of drift which the Governments of France and England have followed, and are still following. They do not choose to face the facts. The French Government are prepared to agree to delay. They think that the co-operation of British troops will materially assist in the pacification of the disturbed area, and they insist that unity of views "and action" between England and France is an essential factor in the work of restoring order. A common policy between France and England, concludes The Times, "logically and methodically pursued," is the indispensable condition of peace, not merely in Silesia, but throughout the world.

POSTAL TAX ON TRADE.

The Parliamentary Correspondent of The Times writes:—The Postmaster-General was, I have reason to believe, greatly impressed by the views he heard from two deputations yesterday as to the injurious effect on our oversea trade and on British commercial propaganda abroad of the proposed increase of foreign postage. He promised to take into serious consideration the arguments advanced. There is a hopeful feeling that the Postmaster-General may be able to announce to-morrow, as a result of his reconsideration of the whole matter, that it will not be necessary to enforce the proposed increases so far as foreign postage is concerned.

BETTER COAL OUTLOOK.

The Labour Correspondent of The Times, writing upon the conferences which have just taken place between the coal-owners and the miners, says:—Such unofficial information as was forthcoming on what occurred behind closed doors was of a very much more hopeful complexion than has been the case for weeks past. A member of the Miners' Executive not ordinarily conspicuous for moderation of view expressed the opinion that the owners had made a considerable advance towards meeting their case, and from the owners' side came the statement that the gap had been considerably narrowed.

OTHER MORNING PAPERS.

ADMIRAL SIMS AND SINN FEIN.

Admiral Sims, United States Navy, was the guest yesterday (says the Morning Post) of the English-speaking Union, at a luncheon in the Hyde Park Hotel, London, and, in responding to the toast of his health, spoke of the spirit of the great alliance between England and American during the war. America was trying to perpetuate that spirit in time of peace. It was their business to counteract the dangerous influences of those who were the enemies of both countries. He had been greatly misrepresented when it was alleged that he was opposed to everything Irish, and to the whole Irish nation. In an article which he had written, he told the people of America the facts with regard to the action of Sinn Fein against them and their troops during the war, and how a great many lives and ships were lost on this account through forces being diverted from escorting merchant ships and other important services. The same influences were at work to-day, carrying war against both America and this country, and trying to sap the good relations between the two nations which had been established while they were co-operating at sea. The sympathisers with Sinn Fein in America had the blood of both British and American boys on their hands. It was necessary that their influence for harm should be counteracted.

ENGLAND AND FRANCE.

The Morning Post to-day, in a leading article dealing with the possibility of an alliance between England and France, says:—Italy can see neither in France nor in England, considered alone, any prospect upon which to found herself. But in an alliance between France and England Italy might see something at once stronger and more sympathetic. And an alliance between these three in Europe would represent a power for peace so strong that no single nation or combination of nations would care to quarrel with it. For, above all, there is nothing between France and England of any importance. We have both enough territory. What we both desire is peace and the assurance of national security.

COAL SITUATION.

MORE HOPEFUL OUTLOOK.

MINERS' BALLOT PROPOSED

Discussions between the coal-owners and the Miners' Executive were resumed in London yesterday in a hopeful and amicable spirit. The Executive had a preliminary meeting.

The joint conference concluded at 1.15, when an agreed statement was issued that all points of difference between the parties were considered, and the conference adjourned to enable both sides to consider the situation.

Separate conferences were held in the afternoon, and, subsequent to the meeting of the Miners' Executive, it was announced that they had decided to call a delegate conference for Friday, when they would recommend that a ballot vote be taken on the owners' proposals.

The miners' Executive sat for three hours, and an official statement, issued by Mr. Frank Hodges, said that the Executive Committee of the Miners' Federation have had under consideration the points presented by the owners at the meetings, and have decided to present a series of questions to the owners at a further meeting to be held to-day, at 11 o'clock, for final elucidation. The Executive have also decided to call a special delegate conference of the Federation for Friday at 10.30 a.m. at the Memorial Hall. At the conference the Executive will submit a full report of the proposals of both owners and the Government, and will recommend that a ballot vote of the members be taken upon the proposals.

IRISH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY AND REUNION.

Yesterday the Bishop of Down and Connor and Dromore (the Right Rev. C. T. P. Grierson) paid a visit to the General Assembly of the Irish Presbyterian Church, at present holding their annual Assembly at Belfast. His lordship was cordially welcomed by the Moderator and members, and in the course of an address said that the fact that he was there that afternoon showed that a great change had come over the Churches. He had always felt that between two Churches there was much that was in common.

The Rev. Dr. Park said that they most heartily welcomed the Bishop of Down on their platform. He proposed that the Big Committee be asked to nominate a Special Committee to meet the Committee appointed by the General Synod.

The Rev. Dr. Taylor seconded the motion, which was carried with enthusiasm.

THE DENTISTS BILL.

The Dentists Bill was considered by a Standing Committee of the House of Commons yesterday. The various clauses, with minor amendments, were approved, and the measure was ordered to be reported.

IMPORTATION OF STORE CATTLE.

MORE IRISH EVIDENCE.

THE FARMERS' CASE.

Colonel W. O'Callaghan-Westropp, President of the Clare Farmers' Association, gave evidence before the Royal Commission on the importation of store cattle in London yesterday. He said that he was of opinion that the shortage of store cattle at the moment was due to causes which were temporary, and which would lose their effect in two years. For six years preceding the Act of 1896 they had experience of Canadian cattle west of the River Shannon. The cattle were very fine, big, well-shaped, but very hungry, and it was found that they could feed larger numbers of Irish cattle on the same acreage because the Canadian cattle took longer to mature. A great deal of discouragement would be produced among the farmers as a result of the admission of cattle from foreign shores. By foreign shores he explained that he meant places outside the United Kingdom. He was of the opinion that they should keep Ireland as a unit both commercially and strategically.

CANADIAN HERDS IMPROVED.

Cross-examined, witness said that he had heard that the Canadian herds had improved since 1896. He did not like the expression that he opposed the removal of the embargo because of the "Irish farmers' practical monopoly." There was other competition, particularly from the milk branch. The tendency now was to drop the utility breed, and to specialise. If there was a tendency in Ireland to prefer fattening cattle he was unaware of it. He himself fattened cattle and sent them over as forward cattle. On the question of the embargo the entire Irish cattle trade, as far as he knew, was unanimous in opposing its removal. He had been President of two conferences on the subject, which were composed of people who had never sat in the same room together before. They were all the best of friends, and quite unanimous.

MR. J. W. YOUNG.

Mr. J. W. Young, of Stradbally, Queen's County, said he represented the Irish Farmers' Union. He had considered the question as to whether free import would reduce the price of beef to the consumer. The consumer, of course, was primarily concerned with the cost of his food, and cared not at all for the interests of agriculture. He exercised an enormous political influence in his food. Witness, however, thought he could show that the opening of the British ports free to cattle from abroad would not reduce the price of beef, but, as a matter of fact, he considered it would increase the cost, and in the end diminish the supply of stores to be fattened in England and Scotland. Ultimately it would reduce England to dependence upon the dead meat trade and place it helplessly in the hands of the meat "trusts." The importation of foreign cattle must shake the confidence of the home breeder, because there was always the possibility that it would injure his financial interests by introducing disease among the valuable pedigree herds, and by lessening the supply of home-bred stores for fattening.

MR. M'LAUGHLIN.

Mr. McLaughlin, a farmer in Co. Louth, supported the evidence of the previous witnesses. He said that his farm was devoted to the production of fat and store cattle. The introduction of cheap stores might increase the feeders' profits, but the danger of disease would more than outweigh the possibility of increased profits. "I accept Canada's clean bill of health in the same way that I would accept a return of criminal statistics from a country with no police," he said, amid laughter. He shared the apprehension expressed by the previous witnesses in regard to the meat "trusts." The meat "trust" octopus is in full swing in America, and if Great Britain is made dependent on Canada, or on other foreign stores, the meat "trusts," with the assistance of America, will soon secure control, he declared.

Corroborative evidence was given on behalf of the Irish farmers by Mr. Maher, of Kilkenny.

Further evidence in support of the Irish farmers' opposition to the removal of the embargo was given by Mr. W. J. Fahy, Cork; Colonel Loftus Bryan, Wexford; and Captain H. T. Ryan, Cork.

The Commission adjourned until to-day.

PARLIAMENT.

THE INDUSTRIES BILL.

STATEMENT BY MR. FISHER

The debate was continued in the House of Commons yesterday on the Safeguarding of Industries Bill, an amendment to the second reading having been moved on the previous day by Sir Donald Maclean for the rejection of the measure.

Mr. George Terrell said that the opposition to the bill did not seem to be supported by any considerable body of opinion representative of the manufacturing and trading interests of the country.

Sir G. Collins said a country with a depreciated exchange could not maintain its export trade. The more that the Government's proposals were examined the more it was seen that they would not stand argument.

Mr. Manville maintained that Chambers of Commerce supported the bill.

Sir A. Williamson said that he supported the key industries proposals of the bill, and he would also support proposals against any deliberate policy of dumping which aimed at the killing of British industries, but the proposals of the bill with regard to depreciated exchanges were more menacing to the trade of this country. Under the Government proposals many of the things manufacturers desired to buy would become dearer, and manufacturers would be driven to depend on the home market.

THE GOVERNMENT'S POSITION.

Mr. Fisher agreed that it was necessary to proceed with extreme caution in dealing with dumping. He thought that the proposals of the bill met the needs of the situation in this behalf. This was the permanent and, therefore, the important part of the bill. The position with regard to the exchanges was abnormal, and it was met by a temporary provision. He admitted that there was no clear evidence of a desire on the part of Germany to keep down the currency, but there was a very strong case for temporary action of the kind indicated in the bill. He pointed out that this part of the bill became operative only where the volume of goods coming from a country where the exchanges had collapsed was such as to cause serious unemployment in any industry. As to the protection of key industries, Adam Smith and John Stuart Mill would not have objected to that part of the bill. At first he had thought that a subsidy would be a cleaner and more economic method of dealing with key industries. (Opposition cheers.) But there were great objections to a subsidy, and he had come to the conclusion that the method proposed in the bill was preferable. He considered that the position generally was met in a practical and reasonable way in the bill.

Colonel Wedgwood said that the bill would raise prices, and it was intended to do so. (Opposition cheers.) It would only have the effect of shifting unemployment from one trade to another. This was the bill of the Federation of British Industries.

Sir John Randles welcomed the bill, which, he said, would prevent mischiefs which had happened in the past.

After further debate the closure was moved, and the bill was read a second time by 312 votes to 92.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

THE HOUSING BILL.

The Lord Chancellor took his seat on the Woolsack in the House of Lords at 4.15 o'clock yesterday.

The House went into Committee on the Captive Birds Shooting (Prohibition) Bill, which imposes a penalty up to £25, or, alternatively, or in addition thereto, imprisonment not exceeding three months, on anyone taking part in shooting captive birds liberated from a trap.

The Earl of Lanesborough declared that the bill had been rushed through the House of Commons without due notice. He had received petitions from thousands of persons all over the country protesting against this interference with a poor man's sport. He moved an amendment confining the operation of the bill to the shooting of tame pigeons from a trap.

Lord Newton described the bill as a gross piece of hypocrisy.

Lord Buckmaster said that the practice dealt with was nothing but a degradation and an abomination, and reflected unjustly on legitimate sport.

Lord Lambourne, as the promoter of the bill, said that he could not accept the amendment. It was designed to wreck the bill.

Lord Onslow, for the Government, supported Lord Lambourne's view.

The amendment was rejected.

Lord Lanesborough moved to reduce the money penalty to £10.

Lord Onslow pointed out that the penalty in the bill was a maximum. Smaller fines could be imposed at discretion.

The amendment was defeated by 69 to 5.

The bill passed through Committee unamended.

The Earl of Onslow moved the second reading of the Housing Bill, which has passed the Commons, and which extends by eighteen months the time within which grants can be made to private builders.

The second reading was agreed to.

A Reuter's Cairo telegram, dated Monday, states that the official Egyptian Delegation will leave for London on June 25th.

NORTHERN PARLIAMENT ENROLLED.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY.

MESSAGE FROM THE KING.

MAJOR HUGH O'NEILL ELECTED SPEAKER.

VICEROY AND THE STATE OF IRELAND.

MAKING HISTORY.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

Ulster is making history very quietly. Yesterday morning at nine o'clock a glorious summer sun shone on the bricky gauntness of Belfast. Men and women were hurrying along the principal thoroughfares to their work. All the shops were open, and there was little, if anything, of the holiday spirit in the streets. Donegall place and Royal avenue showed a good display of flags, and the City Hall flew the banners of all the leading Allied Powers; but there was no bunting, there were no favours, and there were no crowds. Between nine and ten a detachment of the Norfolk Regiment, accompanied by its band, marched down Royal avenue to the City Hall. The music filled every window like magic, and a thousand heads, sleek, bobbed, and curly, looked down on the passing pageant. But it was only a flash in the pan. In a minute or two business was resumed, and it was not until after ten o'clock that people began to gather outside the City Hall. Even then there was little evidence of popular interest. One can often see as large a crowd watching a raid on a public-house in Dublin. The Belfast people have work to do at ten o'clock in the morning; and, what is more important, they do it.

His Excellency Lord FitzAlan, Viceroy of Ireland, paid his first official visit to Belfast on Tuesday for the opening of the Northern Parliament.

THE CITY COUNCIL'S ADDRESS.

Inside the gorgeous building, however, things were different. At about 10.15 the City Council foregathered in the ballroom to present an address of welcome to the Lord Lieutenant. The Belfast City Council is typical of the Northern Province. Clad in crimson and ermine, it looked the picture of solid efficiency. Most of these men were orthodox Covenanters, clearly impressed by the solemnity of the occasion at which they were about to assist, but a very charming lady lent grace to their stolidity, and the keen eyes of a boyish Labour Alderman bespoke the dynamic force of a rising power in the land. The grandeur of the room made even the stalwart bandsmen of the R.I.C. look small and out of place. It was furnished very beautifully with palms, and provided an excellent setting for the brilliance of the City Fathers' robes. The crash of the National Anthem heralded the arrival of His Excellency, who, accompanied by Viscountess FitzAlan and the Lord Mayor, resplendent in gold, lost no time in getting to work. At first glance Viscount FitzAlan reminds one irresistibly of Marshal Foch. He has the same bushy grey moustache and the same kindly, albeit purposeful, eyes. The Lord Mayor was palpably nervous at first, but when Lord FitzAlan replied to the address his quiet confidence proved to be contagious. The Lord Lieutenant is an excellent speaker. He has a fine, resonant voice, and his little speech made a deep impression on his audience. Wearing the collar of the Knights of St. Patrick, he shook hands with all the members of the Corporation, who passed in single file before his dais, and then the National Anthem burst forth again and the Viceregal party left the room.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

The Parliament proper assembled in the Council Chamber, which is comparatively a small room, provided with pews like a church. It was packed. At one end stood the Speaker's chair, behind and above which was the seat reserved for the Lord Lieutenant. The members, nearly all of whom wore the conventional silk hats, were seated in two groups to the right and left of the chair respectively, and the customary table of the House (a relic, by the way, of the old Irish Parliament) occupied the centre of the floor. The forty Unionist members were present, but there were no Nationalists or Sinn Feiners. Had some of the latter turned up just for the fun of the thing, an interesting situation would have arisen, because, so far as one could see, no arrangements had been made to accommodate them, as all the available seats within the bar of the House were occupied by the faithful Forty. In a gallery, facing the Speaker's chair, a battery of cameras and cinematograph machines was installed. The rest of the space was filled with spectators, most of whom seemed to be ladies, and to the left of the chair was a galaxy of Marquises and Marchionesses and Peers of the Realm. Conspicuous here were the Marquis of Londonderry and the youthful Viscount Castlereagh. A hundred years have brought many changes to this distressful land of ours.

THE PARLIAMENT OPENED.

The first notable arrival was the Primate, who was robed, and led the whole assembly in prayer. While the members were standing one noticed that the Treasury Bench was occupied by Sir James Craig, Mr. Pollock, Sir Dawson Bates, Mr. Andrews, and Mr. Archdale. On the opposite side the striking figure of Mr. Hanna towered above his neighbours, and at the top of the back row Messrs. Duff and Twaddell looked as if they might form the nucleus of a lively Opposition. The Viceroy entered the Chamber from behind the chair, and the hour of Northern Ireland struck. The Clerk of the House, bewigged and gowned, read a short proclamation, which was followed immediately by Lord FitzAlan's opening statement. Here again one was struck by His Excellency's dignified demeanour as he called upon His Majesty's faithful Commons to elect a Speaker from among their number. Then he retired, and the work of the Parliament began. Mr. Coote had the honour of making the first speech, being pointed at solemnly by the Clerk of the House. He proposed Major O'Neill for the office of Speaker, and his remarks were punctuated by appreciative applause. The proposal was seconded by Mr. McGuffin, who quoted Burke, and paid a warm tribute to the qualities of the Speaker designate. The latter, who rose to submit himself to the judgment of the House, seemed to be remarkably young for so responsible a position as that of Speaker; but as soon as he began to speak one was forced to recognise that, whatever be the future of the Northern Assembly, a better choice could not have been made, and, if men of Major O'Neill's type are entrusted with the destinies of the province Ulster will have little to fear.

"We have no traditions," said the prospective Speaker, "but we are entitled to make the traditions of the Mother of Parliaments our own." "Whatever you may say about the Ulster Parliament,' whispered an American spectator, "that fellow is going to make good in his job." In more respectful terms, such was everybody's impression. Everything that Major O'Neill did was dignified and correct. He presented himself to the Viceroy, who returned to learn the decision of the House, and took the oath of allegiance with admirable modesty. Then he retired to be robed. In the meanwhile the other members took the oath, some individually, others three at a time. During this ceremony one noticed for the first time that two lady members had seats in the House, and that one of them was wearing a "picture" hat.

A TOUCH OF COMEDY.

The Speaker's return to the House in his full-bottomed wig was the signal for the Lord Lieutenant's final departure. Thenceforward Major O'Neill took full command of the proceedings, and everything went like clockwork. "Order, order," from the chair checked every whisper, and a couple of routine motions were put and carried without a dissentient voice. Sir James Craig then proposed that Parliament be adjourned until Wednesday, June 22nd, at 11.30 a.m., and the formal business of the House came to an end. Then a remarkable thing happened. The Speaker gravely requested all members to remain quiet for a few minutes, as a photographer wanted to take a photograph of the House. All eyes were lifted to the gallery, whence a voice was heard beseeching the first Parliament of Northern Ireland to be "All steady a second, please!" The House froze into an awkward rigidity. A camera clicked, the Speaker relapsed into reposeful austerity, and the voice broke an almost painful silence with "Just another second, Mr. Speaker." The "second" expanded itself into about a minute and a half while the gentleman in the gallery rigged up an enormous magnesium ribbon. It was over in a flash; but the flash was so sudden and so uncomfortably intense that most of the people in the room "ducked" involuntarily. There was the beginning of a laugh, but it got no further. Mr. Speaker, at any rate, was not ruffled, and his sharp rebuke reminded us all that we were within the precincts of a House of Commons. For all that, the incident was incongruous; but modern journalism must be served.

THE SPIRIT OF THE NORTH.

Crossing the frontier homewards from Armagh into Louth, the Southern mind is filled with mixed reflections. The one paramount lesson of the proceedings in the Belfast City Hall is that these men and women are in deadly earnest. About that there can be no mistake. Everything yesterday was done au grand sérieux, and the face of every one of those forty members of Ulster's first Parliament bore witness to the fact that, if the achievement of success lies in their power, they will achieve it. Every word that was spoken, in public or in private, seemed to be heavy with a fully recognised responsibility. There was no sign of bitterness, no trace of vainglory or of clap-trap. Ulster is determined to make good. This spirit of dogged resolve seemed to pervade the whole atmosphere of Belfast yesterday. What other city in Europe would have worked on such an occasion? But for the figures of the recent elections the visitor would find it hard to believe that Ulster took any interest in her politics at all. The streets were searched in vain for an Orange emblem; it was a city of empty button-holes.

Criticism is cheap nowadays, and, doubtless, it would be easy to pick holes in the fabric of the new Parliament. But yesterday was a beginning, not an end. Its events shifted the whole basis of Ireland's political being, the centre of gravity of which, for better or for worse, is now firmly established in Belfast. How long it will remain there cannot be foretold, but, in the light of yesterday's experiences, this much seems to be certain: the Parliament of Northern Ireland has few illusions. Those who attended the ceremonies in the City Hall were impressed, above all else, by the key of restraint in which the whole proceedings were pitched. That is a happy omen.

THE PRESS ARRANGEMENTS.

In one department, however, Ulster has something to learn from other parts of the world. The arrangements for the Press left much to be desired. Only ten Press tickets were available for the luncheon at which Viscount FitzAlan made a speech that the whole world will want to read this morning. Accommodation, of course, was limited, but, surely, when the King comes to Belfast the Prime Minister of Northern Ireland will insist that the Press shall be granted more adequate facilities.

VICEROY'S ARRIVAL.

June the seventh was, for officialdom in Belfast, a day of intermittent ceremony. The Viceregal party arrived at the city by the Fleetwood steamer Duke of Cornwall at 8.15 a.m. Awaiting it at the wharf were the Lord Mayor (Councillor W. F. Coates, D.L.), the High Sheriff (Alderman Joseph Davison, J.P.), the Lord Lieutenant of the City (Lord Pirrie), and some members of the Government that was about to be inaugurated—Lord Londonderry, Sir James Craig, and Mr. H. M. Pollock, D.L. Present also were Sir Ernest Clarke, Under-Secretary for Ulster, and representatives of the military and police forces. The Viceroy and Lady FitzAlan drove to Ormiston, where they breakfasted with Lord and Lady Pirrie.

PROCESSION TO THE CITY HALL.

Afterwards there was a small but stately procession from Ormiston to the City Hall. The Viceregal party set out in three semi-state landaus, each drawn by four horses, with outriders and postillions, and all along the route greetings were cheerily waved from windows and the sidewalks. Only one stop was made, and that when a bouquet was presented to the Viceroy by a beautiful little girl, who, with her school-fellows of the Belmont National School, met the carriages on the road. By the time of their arrival there was a considerable number of people in the vicinity of the City Hall, but there was orderliness everywhere, and the big and widely distributed guard of the Royal Irish Constabulary in the thoroughfares seemed unnecessarily strong. A band of the Norfolks had enlivened the crowd assembled to greet the Viceroy, and continued playing almost till the procession swung from High street into Donegall place. The appearance of the visitors was signalled by a great outburst of cheering. The procession halted near the City Hall, and Lord and Lady FitzAlan alighted and were received by Brigadier-General Carter Campbell and Colonel Hobbs. The order for the Royal salute rang out, and the guard before the Titanic Statue presented arms, the King's Colours were dipped, and the band played the National Anthem.

This stately moment in the warm sunshine ended with another burst of cheering from the growing crowd, cheering which rose and fell for minutes. The Viceroy and Lady FitzAlan, with their suite, then went to the City Hall building to accomplish the main purpose of their visit.

OTHER ARRIVALS.

The Marquis of Dufferin and Ava was one of the first to arrive after the Viceregal party had disappeared. Next came Brigadier-General Sir William Hacket-Pain, K.B.E., Divisional Commissioner for Ulster, followed by Mr. William Grant, the Unionist Labour member for the North Division of Belfast. A few minutes later came Sir Robert Anderson, who headed the poll for Derry. Mr. H. M. Pollock, D.L., one of the Cabinet Ministers-designate, next drove up, and then in quick succession came Mr. William Coote, M.P., and Mr. S. McGuffin, M.P., who were, respectively, to move and second the election of the Speaker. A few minutes later Major the Hon. Hugh O'Neill, the first Speaker of the new Parliament, walked up, in company with Mr. Arthur I. Dasent, of London, who is acting as Clerk to the House. Mr. George B. Hanna, M.P., and Mrs. Hanna also arrived on foot. Others who attended were Captain Herbert Dixon, M.P., and Mrs. Dixon; Major Shillington, one of the Unionist members for Armagh, and Mrs. Shillington; the Bishop of Down and Connor and Dromore, the Moderator of the General Assembly, the Rev. H. P. Glenn, A.B., ex-Moderator.

AT THE CITY HALL.

At 10.30 the Lord Lieutenant and the Viscountess FitzAlan, attended by His Excellency's Private Secretary, Mr. S. G. Tallents, C.B., C.B.E., and Captain R. Wyndham-Quin, C.B.E., M.C., A.D.C., arrived at the City Hall, and were received by the Lord Mayor (Councillor W. F. Coates, D.L.), the High Sheriff (Alderman Davison, J.P.), the Town Clerk (Sir Robert Meyer), and the City Chamberlain (Sir Frederick Moneypenny, M.V.O.), and escorted to the Large Hall.

The interior of the Hall, rich enough in design as it is, seemed to have been heightened in its beauty for the occasion. Every room which was to be associated with the inauguration of the Parliament had been touched with splendour. In the Large Hall were the Lord Mayor and the members of the Belfast Corporation, fully robed, and at the appearance of the Viceroy "God Save the King" was played by the band of the R.I.C.

THE WELCOME.

On behalf of the citizens of Belfast the Lord Mayor welcomed Their Excellencies very cordially. "We hope," he added, "that we may be honoured by frequent visits in the future, and we can assure you, as the representative of His Majesty the King as well as on your own account, that you will receive the same loyal welcome on each successive occasion."

ADDRESS TO HIS EXCELLENCY.

An address in these terms was then read by Sir Robert Meyer and presented to His Excellency:—

To His Excellency the Viscount FitzAlan of Derwent, Lord Lieutenant-General and General Governor of Ireland.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,—

We, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens of the City of Belfast, desire to approach Your Excellency, and to express, as we have on many previous occasions, our loyalty to the person and Throne of His Most Gracious Majesty the King.

We cordially and sincerely welcome Your Excellency and the Viscountess FitzAlan on this, your first, official visit to our city.

Your Excellency succeeds an illustrious holder of the exalted office of Lord Lieutenant at the commencement of a new and eventful chapter in the history of Ireland. We confidently hope your government will be conducted with impartiality, prudence, and firmness, and that all movements tending to advance the welfare of the community will have your sympathetic support, and we sincerely hope that the country will soon enjoy the blessings of peace and good-will so essential to the security and contentment of its people.

The Imperial Parliament has deemed it proper to transfer a large portion of its legislative and administrative powers to Parliaments established in Ireland, and we, loyally abiding by that decision, will do our utmost to support the Government of Northern Ireland in its efforts to promote the happiness and prosperity of the people of this province of the United Kingdom.

Your Excellency will always be welcomed when, amidst your other responsible duties, you can find leisure to visit us and make yourself acquainted with our institutions and industries, feeling assured that you will be loyally received, and given every opportunity to acquire information regarding Belfast, which we have always looked on as the chief industrial city in Ireland, and which we are now proud to think has become the capital of the Northern Province.

Signed on behalf of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens of the City of Belfast,

W. F. COATES, Lord Mayor.
ROBERT MEYER, Town Clerk.

THE VICEROY'S REPLY.

"As His Majesty's representative in Ireland," replied Lord FitzAlan, "I thank you for your expression of loyalty and devotion to his person and his Throne. I thank you also for the generous terms in which you have welcomed myself and Lady FitzAlan to your great and famous city. I am very sensible of the grave responsibility which rests upon me as successor of the illustrious men who have held before me the office of Lord Lieutenant. I come among you at a time momentous in Irish history. The long and celebrated annals of Belfast—annals of loyalty, of splendid determination, and of fine achievement—lend a proud meaning to the words in which you have pledged support to the Government of Northern Ireland. Inaugural steps for the foundation of a Government are about to be taken here in your midst. Nothing can rob that event of its significance. With all my heart, I join in the desire which you have expressed for peace and good-will, and I earnestly hope that this hour, when it comes to take its place in history, may be found to have been the forerunner of a time of happiness and prosperity for Ireland."

The members of the Belfast Corporation present, together with the Town Clerk and the City Chamberlain, were afterwards presented to the Viceroy by the Lord Mayor.

THE PARLIAMENT BORN.

The simple function of the presentation of the address concluded, most of those who were privileged to attend the hall repaired to the Council Chamber. It was within the narrow confines of this room that the Parliament was born. But a few hundred persons were admitted, and the various masters of this big ceremony had been vainly pressed in the preceding days by thousands of persons, who, unaware of the poverty of space, sought to gain admission. The accommodation was almost entirely devoted to members, their wives, Deputy Lieutenants of the city and counties, Chairmen of Corporation Committees and County Councils, County Court Judges, and leading citizens of every walk of life in the six counties. Present also were:—The Marquis of Londonderry, Viscount Castlereagh, Marquis of Dufferin, Lord and Lady Pirrie, Lord and Lady Clanmorris, the Bishop of Down (Right Rev. Dr. C. T. P. Grierson), the Bishop of Clogher (Right Rev. Dr. M. Day), the Bishop of Derry (Right Rev. Dr. Peacocke), the ex-Moderator of the General Assembly (Rev. Dr. H. P. Glenn), Lord Dunleath, Sir William Whitla, M.P., Sir G. Clark, Bart.; Right Hon. Sir J. Johnston, Sir R. Meyer (Town Clerk), Sir F. Moneypenny, M.V.O. (City Chamberlain); County Court Judge Johnston, K.C.; the Commissioner of Police (Mr. J. F. Gelston), Mr. T. W. Brown, K.C.; ex-Lord Mayor Right Hon. J. C. White, Mr. R. H. H. Baird, J.P.; Mr. H. T. Barrie, M.P.; Right Hon. S. Cunningham, and a score of Pressmen from various parts of the Kingdom and America.

NO ROLL CALL.

Curiously enough, when half-past eleven came and the business began, and all Unionist members—forty in number—were in their seats, there was no roll or announcement of names. Hon. members sat on each side of the House, with the clerks' table in the centre. At 11.25, when the future members of the Government were in their seats, Major the Hon. R. W. H. O'Neill entered, and sat by Mr. William Grant, on the left of the chair. Two minutes later Sir James Craig came, and then the Mace Bearer advanced with the Mace, bowed twice, deposited the Mace on the table, bowed twice again, and withdrew. The Primate entered the Chamber the next moment, and whispered conversations ceased. The next act was one of prayer, which the Primate led. He intoned the Lord's Prayer and a special prayer of invocation. While he did this, members, following a custom of the House of Commons, turned with their backs to the Primate.

ENTER, THE VICEROY.

At the end of the prayer, and while all were yet on their feet, the Viceroy entered the Chamber, and took his seat on the dais. His Excellency invited the members of the House of Commons to be seated. Then the Clerk read aloud the proclamation convening the Parliament.

ELECTION OF SPEAKER.

Next the Viceroy intimated formally His Majesty's wish that the House should proceed to the election of a Speaker, and the company stood while he withdrew.

Mr. William Coote proposed the election of the Hon. Robert William Hugh O'Neill as Speaker of the House. "We are met to open a new page of history," he said. "We are parting, to some extent, with our membership in the British House of Commons, but before we part with the old love and take on the new I think it is only right that we should pay our tribute to the fairness, impartiality, and patience of that great assembly, and to say that we hope we shall model our new Parliament upon the lines of the old, and that we shall take the British House of Commons in all its glory as the standard of excellence to which we should like to attain. It was my good fortune a few months ago to be one of a party who were visitors to the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Massachusetts in the City of Boston, and I was struck with the tribute paid there by the Speaker of the House of Representatives. He did me the honour of asking me to address that House as a member of the British Parliament, and he introduced me in these words—'I wish to introduce to you a member of the oldest, freest, and most noble assembly of freemen in all the world—the British House of Commons.' We, therefore, with this object in view, and those ideals before us, are very anxious to select an honourable member of this House who we hope and believe is endowed with the gifts necessary for such a high office. We realise the great trust we are placing in our honourable and gallant friend. He will be the custodian of our honour; he will be the guardian of our liberties, and he will be the protector of minorities in this House, even of individuals, and, therefore, he must be a man who, in our judgment, has qualities necessary for such a high and important position. It has been my good fortune to have collaborated with the honourable and gallant member in the British House of Commons for the last five years. We entered that assembly about the same time. I have been identified with him very closely in all the ramifications of working in that House, both in Committees, public debates, and private conferences. I should like to speak more fully, if he were not present, as to what I think of the quality of mind and the sterling qualities he possesses. From what I know of my honourable and gallant friend, I believe he is above reproach. He is a gentleman who would not do a mean thing, a man of judicial mind, a man who would not come to a hasty conclusion on any subject until he has weighed the matter from every point of view. I am sure the House quite understands that this very honourable position to which we are about to elect our honourable friend is no sinecure. This House is no mere plaything. We are here to try to build up the waste places of our province and strengthen this outpost of the Empire, and it will require all the strategy, all the firmness, all the business capacity and the common-sense of the Speaker from time to time to conduct the affairs of this House; but we can assure him that he will have the sympathy of every honourable member of this House, and their whole-hearted support."

MR. McGUFFIN.

This motion was seconded by Mr. McGuffin, a Labour member, and also a member of the British House of Commons. He said:—"If refinement and greatness in intellect, a sympathetic and kindly disposition, a chivalrous and dignified demeanour under almost all circumstances, and a calm and judicial mind in the discussion of even the most contentious measures—if these qualifications furnish the endowment necessary for the Speaker of this House, then I would say that they are possessed in a pre-eminent degree by the honourable and gallant gentleman whom we purpose to select here to-day. Speaking as a Labour member, and with the full approval of my Labour colleagues in this House, I would like to express our absolute and unanimous approval of the selection of the honourable gentleman to the position of Speaker of this House. He has the fullest confidence of every member of this House. I would even go further, and say that if our Nationalist friends—or members, pardon me—if the Nationalist members of this House had felt it convenient to attend here to-day, as expressive of their sympathy with the great undertaking we have entered upon as a Parliament, and their desire to co-operate with us in the government and administration of the law of the Northern area, I am inclined to think there is no member of this House to whom they would take less objection in the election of Speaker than the honourable gentleman." In conclusion, Mr. McGuffin commended to the House the advice of the "immortal Burke," who said:—"We should lift our thoughts to the greatness of that office to which, in the order of Providence, we have been called; we ought to advert to the dignity of their high calling. Our forefathers have won a most extensive place, not by conquest, not by suppression, but by promoting the wealth and industry and happiness of mankind."

FIRST SPEAKER.

Major O'Neill, who was cordially received, submitted himself to the will of the House. "I am highly sensible of the difficulties with which this House is bound to be faced," he said, in a voice whose every word was clearly heard in the Chamber. "It is a newly-created assembly, and the way in which we surmount our difficulties, whether with success or with partial failure, depends to a very large extent upon the way in which we conduct our proceedings. At present we have no traditions. The parent assembly which has given us birth is the Mother of Parliaments. Its rules, its customs, its practice have been built as a result of centuries of experience, and a great wealth of tradition—tradition which, after all, we have a right to claim a share in, since it has been our people in past generations who have helped to build up and fashion it. I know it is the desire of this House that we should base our proceedings upon that model, and should live up to those traditions. (Hear, hear.) As a member of the Imperial Parliament for the last six years I have had an opportunity of observing its procedure, and the former at close quarters. I shall endeavour to profit by what I have learned in that place; but I shall require, if you do me the honour of electing me to-day, all the support honourable members can give me. I shall require of the fullest measure their sympathy, and I hope, if I conduct myself properly, in the not far distant future I may, perhaps, be able to say I shall have attained also their affection. (Hear, hear.) My greatest wish would be to deserve and always maintain untarnished the reputation of this Assembly as a House of Commons worthy of our province, and worthy of the Empire to which we are so proud to belong. I am more than conscious of the unfitness of myself for this great task you have given me, but if I am able to command the support of honourable members my duty will be made lighter and easier. In once again submitting myself to the will of the House, I cannot, perhaps, more fittingly conclude than by quoting those well-known and very fine words so often mentioned in the King's Speech—'May the blessing of Almighty God rest upon our labours.'"

Major O'Neill was conducted to the chair by Mr. Coote and Mr. M'Guffin, and he expressed

AMBUSHES IN DUBLIN.

REBEL DUMP CAPTURED.

THREE MEN ARRESTED.

TWO MEN WOUNDED AT WESTLAND ROW.

General Military Headquarters issued the following last night:—

At 3.30 o'clock this afternoon a party of troops were ambushed in Capel street, Dublin. They made two arrests, one of whom has since been identified as one of the ambushers.

Auxiliary R.I.C. who operated immediately after the attack captured a motor car, which the assailants had apparently abandoned in their flight.

At about the same time another party of troops was ambushed near Chancery bridge. The troops returned the fire, and one of the ambushers was seen to fall and to be carried off by his confederates.

Auxiliary R.I.C. operated immediately after the ambush, and discovered in the immediate vicinity a dump, from which the attackers had probably been working.

It consisted of

Four old-pattern rifles,
A quantity of revolver ammunition,
Two telescopes,
Two motor cycles, and
One bicycle.

One arrest was made at this place.

The Crown forces suffered no casualties in the above two attacks.

AMBUSH AT THE CASTLE GATES.

Shortly before 4 p.m. yesterday a motor car, which, according to onlookers, contained four officers of the R.I.C., reached Dublin Castle gates in Palace street. As the vehicle turned into Palace street two or more shots rang out apparently from the opposite side of Dame street, in the vicinity of the Empire Theatre. The gates leading to the Lower Castle Yard were promptly thrown open, and the motor car entered, being followed almost immediately by an armour-protected car containing Constabulary. Parties of Crown forces promptly turned out from the Castle Yard into the streets, apparently in search of the ambushers, who, however, appear to have made good their escape. The accounts as to what happened, given by civilian eye-witnesses, are somewhat confused.

Dame street and Parliament street were searched by armed Auxiliary forces, and during the search about half a dozen shots were heard, which caused a general stampede. No one appears to have sustained serious injuries, but the driver of an oil car, named Patrick O'Loughlin, was treated at Jervis street Hospital for a slight wound in the leg. He was delivering oil at premises in Capel street when he heard explosions, and his horse bolted, he himself being simultaneously hit in the leg. Subsequently extensive searches were made of the streets and houses along the southern line of quays and in High street and Winetavern street, in which latter thoroughfare some shots were heard.

AMBUSH AT WESTLAND ROW.

TWO MEN WOUNDED.

General Military Headquarters, Dublin, made the following announcement last night:—

At about 8.30 o'clock to-night a bomb was thrown and revolver fire opened on a patrol of the 2nd Worcesters in Great Brunswick street, Dublin.

The fire was returned. The result is not known.

There were no military casualties.

Inquiries which were made at Westland Row last night after the firing show that Bernard O'Connell, aged 24 years, of 164 Clonliffe road, received a bullet wound in the right side. Michael Nolan, aged 21 years, of 12 St. James's avenue, was injured by a bullet in the back. Both men were removed in the Corporation ambulance to Sir Patrick Dun's Hospital. It was reported that another young man had been struck by a splinter, which had knocked out one of his teeth and wounded him in the jaw, but he did not go to hospital.

At about 8.30 o'clock the lorry, which came from the direction of the city, pulled up outside the Fire Brigade Station at Tara street. An officer, a sergeant, and some of the company, dismounted, and men who were sitting at Messrs. McKenzie's windows were ordered to put up their hands. The officer and his men having searched the civilians and found nothing incriminating in their possession returned to the tender and drove to Westland Row. There they were fired upon by a number of armed men, and they returned the fire.

The attackers quickly disappeared when the fire was returned. After the firing, which was heavy, the windows of Messrs. Webster and Co., and of Messrs. Sharpe and Co. were found to have been penetrated by bullets, and large indentations were made in the walls of Messrs. Burke's distillery in Brunswick street, and also on the wall at the opposite side of the thoroughfare.

The Corporation ambulance removed O'Connell and Moran from Moss street, which is not far from the scene of the ambush. Additional troops were summoned, and in a short time the Auxiliary police arrived, and stopped and searched people on the street. It is also stated that some shots were fired, and that the firing drew the attention of the military stationed at the Custom House to Shaw street, across the river. It is believed that the military at the Custom House thought that an attack was being made upon them, and they opened fire across the Liffey in the direction of the streets leading from the quay towards Brunswick street.

HEAD CONSTABLE SHOT IN DUBLIN.

While Head Constable Fry was walking with his wife on Monday along London Bridge road, Dublin, he was fired at by two men and seriously wounded in the region of the abdomen. A boy named Andrew Parr, who was passing at the time, was wounded in the foot by one of shots fired by Fry's assailants.

DUBLIN COUNCILLOR ARRESTED.

Mr. T. Nolan, T.C., a member of the Dublin Corporation, was arrested late on Monday night at his residence in Aughrim street.

AMBUSH VICTIMS.

TWO MORE POLICE DEAD.

Our Westport Correspondent states that Constable Dowling, who was wounded in the ambush at Carrowkennedy on Thursday last, died yesterday in a Dublin hospital.

The houses of Messrs. Patrick Joyce, John McDonnell, and T. M. Joyce, auctioneer, also the office of Mr. John Kelly, solicitor, which are situate in James street, Westport, on each side of the police barrack, were commandeered by the police to-day. The occupants were only given two hours to leave.

Our Killorglin Correspondent states that Constable McCormack, Killorglin, a native of Dublin, who was wounded in the recent ambush, has since died. This is the fifth death. McCormack had seen some war service, and had come safely through fire on a few occasions since he joined the Constabulary. There were pulpit references to the shootings and prayers for the victims at the Masses in Milltown on Sunday. The Rev. J. Nolan, P.P., Killorglin, emphatically condemned the shooting and asked prayers for the deceased men.

NORTHERN PARLIAMENT ENROLLED.

his gratitude for the high honour bestowed on him.

SIR JAMES CRAIG.

Sir James Craig spoke next, offering hearty congratulations to the Speaker on his election. "We are all private members, but the selection and election of Speaker is in the hands of the private members of the Mother of Parliaments, and we here in this Parliament of Northern Ireland reserve to ourselves that the whole of the members shall have the choice of Speaker for all time. It is an invaluable privilege, and right, and we establish it here and now. I congratulate you most heartily on the unanimity of your choice, and I congratulate those who have moved and seconded the resolution which places you in that high position. It is the highest honour the House of Commons can offer to you, and we are sure it will not be long before those who are new members here learn to regard you with the same esteem as those who have served with you in the Imperial Parliament, and I am sure I may, on behalf of all, give to you now the pledge of all of us of our fullest support and encouragement in your high office. I wish you God-speed, and say that all that is necessary to strengthen you in the trying times that lie ahead will be rendered fully by all of us, no matter what position we occupy in the House of Commons."

ELECTION CONFIRMED.

The Lord Lieutenant re-entered the Chamber, and the Speaker-Elect presented himself to His Excellency, who said, "I do, on His Majesty's behalf, most fully approve and confirm you as Speaker."

The Speaker formally claimed the rights and privileges of the House of Commons assured to it by the Government of Ireland Act, 1920. These, the Lord Lieutenant, on the King's behalf, at once confirmed. His Excellency then informed the House that the required oath should be taken, and the election of members of the Senate be proceeded with.

ADMINISTERING THE OATH.

The Lord Lieutenant then left the Chamber, followed by the Speaker, to the Mayor's Parlour, where the oath was administered.

At ten minutes past twelve o'clock the Speaker, clothed in his full-bottomed wig and gown, preceded by the Mace Bearer and followed by the Clerk, entered at the lower end of the Chamber. The mace having been deposited on the table, the Speaker took the oath and signed the roll.

The Front Bench men, Sir James Craig, Mr. Pollock, Sir Dawson Bates, Mr. Andrews, and Mr. Archdale, next took the oath and signed, after which the remaining members went through the formula in batches of three, each shaking hands with the Speaker, as is the custom at Westminster.

When the members were sworn they passed out of the House through the door surmounted by the life-size painting of the late King Edward.

Upon re-entering,

The Prime Minister moved the adoption of the Standing Orders of the Parliament of the United Kingdom, with such modifications as might be found necessary. This was agreed to.

The next motion by the Premier was that on the first occasion on which the House should meet in committee Mr. Thomas Moles take the chair as Chairman of Ways and Means.

The Speaker declared "The 'ayes' have it."

Photographs were then taken, some amusement being caused by one of the camera men from the gallery shouting "A second, Mr. Speaker!"

The Speaker then announced the arrangements for the election of the Senate, whereupon the Premier (who was again cheered) moved the adjournment of the House until 11.30 a.m. on 22nd June.

The first House rose at 12.42 p.m.

PRIME MINISTER'S LUNCHEON.

IRELAND'S FUTURE.

VICEROY CONDEMNS MURDERS.

THE KING'S MESSAGE.

Nearly 200 invitations had been sent out for the luncheon which Sir James and Lady Craig gave at the City Hall Banqueting Chamber at 1.30 o'clock in the afternoon. As Lord and Lady FitzAlan were conducted to the seats of honour a string quartette played the National Anthem. The gathering was a very distinguished one. To the Lord Lieutenant's right sat Lady Craig, Lord Pirrie, the Lady Mayoress, Lord Londonderry, Lady Massereene, Lord Dufferin, Lady Pirrie, Lord Bangor, the Bishop of Down; and to his left Sir James Craig, the Lady FitzAlan, the Primate, the Lord Mayor, the High Sheriff, Lady Clanmorris, the Speaker, Lady Dunleath, Viscount Castlereagh, Mrs. O'Neill.

Grace was said by the Primate.

The Prime Minister, in offering the toast of "The King" said—This morning I took the opportunity, after consultation with the Lord Lieutenant, of telegraphing to His Majesty to know if he would accede to the first request of the Executive of the Parliament of Northern Ireland by opening on the 22nd our new Parliament in person. (Cheers.) And with a rapidity that does credit to a much maligned postal service I have received the following reply:—

"In reply to your telegram, His Majesty the King will have great pleasure in opening your Parliament." (Great cheering.)

The King's health was drunk and the National Anthem sung—for the first time during the day.

THE PRIME MINISTER.

The Prime Minister proposed the toast of "The Lord Lieutenant and Prosperity to Ireland." He said—The Lord Lieutenant's past life before he accepted the high office he now holds is well known to all of us, and more especially to those of us who have had the pleasure of serving in the Imperial House of Commons. Those of my colleagues who have been there throughout the days and long nights that are past always found His Excellency at the post of duty. (Hear, hear.) And, moreover, during the many trying times through which those of us who have the honour of representing constituencies in Ulster have passed, we have always found him a fast friend. (Hear, hear.) At this turn in the events of Irish history His Majesty sent him over to Ireland to be his direct representative, cut off from all politics, but bent, I feel certain, in bringing his weighty personality to bear upon the future of our country. His name, his reputation, his history, is so wrapped up in the fair fame of the history of England that we in Ireland are, indeed, honoured that such a man should come over to take his part in the business of bringing back to the whole country peace, happiness, and prosperity. (Hear, hear.) Nothing that I personally can say will express my own feelings of thankfulness and gratitude for all the kindness I have received at the hands of His Excellency during the fifteen years I have had the honour to be in the Imperial Parliament. This toast, as is always the custom, is coupled with prosperity to Ireland. We here are a mixed community in the North. Our great industries, which, you are fully aware, chiefly centre in the great City of Belfast, but also in the historical City of Derry, and many of our surrounding towns, Portadown, Lisburn, Armagh, and so forth—all of them resound in normal times with the rattle of the loom, and the clanging of the hammer, and with industry which brings prosperity to all classes, and spreads from these towns out into the great agricultural districts. It is perfectly true that at the moment owing to trade depression and owing to the lamentable strike across the water, prosperity in the North here is not what we are accustomed to. It is also true that other parts of Ireland—the South-West—owing to conditions of disturbance unparalleled except in times of international war, are gradually dilapidating and going down the hill. In drinking prosperity to Ireland, to-day we all desire in our hearts that the fullest measure of trade should return to our Northern ports and industries in our towns and agriculture in our country, and that industry will go on as it was accustomed to in former years, and that at the same time the South and West should turn from the horrible conditions now raging and attempt to bring back to their portion of the land also peace and prosperity. Your Excellency, I know of no man who at this juncture in the affairs of Ireland is better able to lend a great hand in restoring peace to our beloved country. May God help you in all that lies ahead, and rest assured the hand of Ulster will always be held out where the object is one that has as its end prosperity to Ireland and loyalty to the Crown. (Applause.)

The toast was enthusiastically honoured.

THE VICEROY'S SPEECH.

Cheers greeted the Viceroy when he rose to speak. He said:—Mr. Prime Minister, Lady Craig, my lords, ladies, and gentlemen,—I find it very difficult to explain to you what I feel as a result of this kind, this generous reception you have given me here to-day. I have come amongst you as a stranger. You have welcomed me as a friend. I appreciate it. Of course I know full well that in the first place your welcome to me is due to the fact that I represent here our beloved King. (Applause.) I know that with the fair fame and intense loyalty of Belfast you will welcome any individual who our Gracious Sovereign might have chosen as Lord Lieutenant, but I do sincerely appreciate this welcome, especially on personal grounds. Ladies and gentlemen, unhappily we are not all of the same religion. (Laughter and applause.) I glory in mine. (Hear, hear.) I daresay you glory in yours. (Applause.) Yes; but a remarkable, rather funny thing occurs to me. If I were to change my religion, I believe everyone in this room would look upon me as a most appalling bounder. If you were to change yours, I would not think anything the worse of you. (Laughter.) You have given me a generous and hearty welcome. I do not deny that I like it. I thank you for it, believe me. Well now, Prime Minister, you coupled with this toast, as is usual, as I understand: "Prosperity to Ireland," and you alluded to the fact—the painful fact—that there is not the prosperity in this country at this moment that we have the right to hope for.

THE CONDITIONS OF PROSPERITY.

I am sorry, on a festive occasion like this, to say a word of a mournful character, but, holding the position I do, I think I must. Ireland is not prosperous. Has Ireland or any other country the right to be prosperous when sin is rampant throughout large portions of the country? (Voices—"No.") Before we can hope to see Ireland prosperous, as she has a right to be, the sin of murder must be eradicated. (Applause.) One of the most deplorable, aye, pathetic things to me coming over to this country is to realise what I am afraid is true, that many of the young men perpetrating those crimes are taught by their leaders, or some of their leaders, that in doing so they are committing no sin. Ladies and gentlemen, if that spirit continues there is no hope for prosperity for this country. (Hear, hear.) And those very men who inculcate such doctrines into the young men of this country know in their hearts that they are acting against the laws of God and of His Church—(applause)—and they are guilty of heinous crime.

THE POLICE FORCES.

Now I want to say one other word in connection with crime in this country, and I hope you will forgive me if I touch on it, but I feel I want to. We know that the force in this country, commonly called the "Black and Tans," are accused of committing serious and grave crimes. Yes, but it is unjust to say that because crimes have been committed the whole force should be, so to speak, charged as being guilty of those crimes. That, ladies and gentlemen, is not justice. (Hear, hear.) It is true—I do not deny it for one moment—let us be frank about these things—that crimes, horrible crimes, have been committed by members of this force. You may find explanations, but there is no excuse for any force under discipline committing these crimes. Provocation? Yes. Explanation? Yes. This force was hastily enlisted and hurriedly set to work without proper discipline. Mistakes, no doubt, have been made, owing, perhaps, to the great hurry. None the less, these crimes have been committed, but not by the force as a whole. (Hear, hear.) And I very much doubt—and I shall be very much surprised—if we hear in the future of any such offences being committed by them again. (Hear, hear.) I mean, that now a proper spirit of discipline exists in that force. As a people who regard justice as essential and necessary, do not think alone of what so many people are saying against this force, remember that there are many things on the other side. Take the miserable, unfortunate burning of the Custom House, that beautiful building in Dublin, with the more serious loss of life that would have happened there had it not been for the energy, the extraordinary alacrity, and courage of a very small number of this young force that appeared there.

PRELIMINARY STEPS.

We have to-day taken the preliminary steps necessary to bring about the formal opening of this Parliament in Northern Ireland to-morrow fortnight. And let me here congratulate you, Prime Minister, and also congratulate you, ladies and gentlemen, that the King has been pleased to announce his will and pleasure to come here and open your Parliament. (Applause.) The Act of Parliament which was passed when you and I, Prime Minister, were in the House of Commons, together with others whom I am glad to see here to-day, is an historic Act. I do not think it will be the less historic because nobody seems to want it. (Laughter.) I have known in my time of a good many Acts of Parliament, and I do not recollect that any of them seemed to be perfect when they became law, even to those who promoted and supported them. I do not pretend for one moment that this Act, which is the foundation of your Parliament in Northern Ireland, is a perfect Act; in fact, I believe it wants amending already, and I shall not be at all surprised if it is amended in the not very far distant future. I know you here did not want it, and that you only accepted it on the advice of your great leader, Lord Carson—(loud applause)—and your present Prime Minister. (Applause.) And if it is not impertinent for me to say so, I think you did well. You wanted no change. (Hear, hear.) But so long as your own particular interests were safeguarded you were willing to lend a hand for the future welfare of your country as a whole. I believe you have done it. I look forward—I may be too optimistic—to what we are starting here to-day, to what will be established here to-morrow fortnight by His Majesty the King—I look forward to that being a big step forward in the future welfare of this country. At any rate, this Act of Parliament which establishes a Parliament here in the North of Ireland, and gives power to establish another Parliament in Southern Ireland, does this—it gives to Irishmen as a whole the right, and, if they choose to exercise it, the power to manage their own affairs. (Hear, hear.)

KEEPING THE RING.

Ladies and gentlemen, it is not for a Saxon like myself—(laughter)—to suggest to you, still less to dictate to you, how this ought to be done. It is for you to arrange and command. My duty, if I may borrow without offence the sporting phrase, is to endeavour to do my share in keeping the ring. (Laughter and applause.) I wish you well, and I believe, with patience, perseverance, and goodwill, it may be done. (Applause.) Prime Minister, you have to-day formed your Government for this Parliament of Northern Ireland. It was my duty as representative of the King to summon you to form that Government under the unwritten rules of the Constitution. I had no alternative but to summon you. Even if I had wanted somebody else, I should have obeyed those unwritten rules, but I do not mind saying that I am glad that it fell to my lot to perform the duty of summoning you, because I believe I have not only done the right thing, but that I have got hold of the right man. (Applause.) I know it. I have helped to administer in a Government associated with him. I have done more than that. I have whipped him—(laughter)—but I will say this about him, he always responded to the crack. (Laughter.) He was always there when he was wanted. Seriously, I have no hesitation in believing that with the Government he has formed you ought, and you will, do well. As to the members of that Government, for the most part, I have only had the pleasure of making their acquaintance to-day. I do rejoice that you have received the services of my noble friend, Lord Londonderry—(applause)—to undertake the arduous and most important work of the Ministry of Education. In the Ministry of Agriculture and Commerce you have an old House of Commons friend in Mr. Archdale. I am sure you are starting well. All I can say—I wish you every possible success. I congratulate you on the proud position you hold as Prime Minister of the Parliament of Northern Ireland. (Applause.)

Sir James Craig gave as a last toast the health of the Lord Mayor, which was cordially honoured.

The Lord Mayor thanked the Prime Minister, on his own behalf and on behalf of the members of the Corporation, for tributes paid to them.

The toast of the health of the Prime Minister was next honoured, and the luncheon came to an end with the singing of the National Anthem.

Afterwards the guests were presented to the Viceroy.

THE EMBARGO ON IRISH CATTLE.

THE NORTHERN CASE.

DEPUTATION TO MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE.

At the Ministry of Agriculture last night Sir Arthur Griffith-Boscawen received a deputation, introduced by Captain Craig, M.P., representing the Londonderry Port and Harbour Commissioners, the Ulster Farmers' Union, and the North of Ireland Horse-Dealers' Association, on the subject of the existing embargo on Irish cattle, due to the prevalence of foot-and-mouth disease in certain districts.

The proceedings were in private, but it is learned that the representatives of the Londonderry Harbour Commissioners suggested a method whereby a wide zone might be drawn across Ireland, separating North from South, which would give complete security. Reasons were also given in support of their opinion that in the natural course of events there would be no danger during the next two or three months of the possibility of store cattle from the South being shipped from the Northern ports. The representatives of the Commission also urged the necessity for limiting the detention in the lairages to ten hours, and that any further detention should be on the farms.

The relaxation of the embargo and the shipment of cattle from parts far removed from the infected area were discussed by the members of the Ulster Farmers' Union, while on behalf of the North of Ireland Horse-Dealers' Association the following resolution was submitted:—

"We, representatives of the various branches of the cattle industry in Armagh and surrounding districts, assembled in public meeting at Armagh on May 31st, 1921, urge upon the Departments of Agriculture in Great Britain and Ireland the imperative necessity of scheduling the areas in Ireland proved to be infected by foot-and-mouth disease, and of opening the ports for the shipment of Irish cattle from non-infected areas. We submit (1) there has been no outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in the Northern area of Ireland within the living memory of man; (2) it is therefore gross injustice to the producers, graziers, dealers, and shippers to prohibit the export of cattle from non-infected areas, or to impose onerous and unnecessary restrictions at the ports of embarkation and landing; (3) we invite experts from the British Ministry of Agriculture to investigate the existing conditions of Irish cattle at our expense, and to report to their own department, and we urge that immediate action be taken."

The Minister of Agriculture promised to consider the question.

Among those who attended were:—Messrs. D. Johnson, President of the Ulster Farmers' Union; W. R. Creswell; T. P. Gill, Secretary of the Irish Department of Agriculture; F. Gilliland, R. Watson, Chairman of the Londonderry Harbour Board; R. S. Crisp, Carter Jackson, A. Heber, and Mrs. E. Robertson.

NUMEROUS AMBUSHES

ROAD MINE IN COUNTY MEATH.

FIGHT WITH REBEL SENTRIES.

General Headquarters, Dublin, issued the following report last night:—

At about noon to-day a Crossley tender, containing two officers and five other ranks, was ambushed at Dundarragh House, on the Kells-Oldcastle road.

A road mine was used by the attackers, which, though severely damaging the car, caused no casualties to its occupants.

The troops pursued the attackers, who fled.

COUNTY LIMERICK AMBUSH.

General Military Headquarters, Dublin, issued the following communiqué yesterday:—

A military cyclist patrol encountered the sentries of a rebel ambush near Riverfield House, two miles north-east of Kilmallock, Co. Limerick, at about 10.50 p.m. on the 5th inst.

Fire was opened by both parties. No military casualties resulted, and the rebel casualties are unknown.

ATTEMPTED MURDER.

FOLLOWED BY AN AMBUSH.

Our Tuam Correspondent states that when Constable Nealon was unlocking the door of his house at Moylough about 7 p.m. on Sunday two young men came up on bicycles and attacked him with revolvers. Mrs. Nealon, her three children, and a woman friend, who were in the house, went to his assistance. The assailants are said to have closed in on Nealon, and they fired about ten shots, all of which missed him, and he escaped across the fields. He was followed by the two men, who continued to fire at him for a short distance.

He reached his station safely at Mountbellew, a distance of one and a half miles away, and fourteen police in charge of an officer drove out in two lorries and a Ford car to investigate the affair. They were ambushed when about half-way. From a bog heavy rifle fire was directed at them. The police dismounted and took cover, replying to the fire with grenades. One constable drove a motor to Mountbellew to summon reinforcements. The fight lasted for an hour and a half. None of the police was injured.

The rebels were entrenched behind a sod fence about 150 yards away in boggy land, and a long trench, by means of which they escaped, was cut behind them.

A WESTMEATH AMBUSH.

Constables, on patrol duty from Kilbeggan (County Westmeath) barrack were ambushed on Monday at Lowertown canal bank.

They returned the fire of their assailants and drove them off without casualties to themselves.

MILITARY STATION FIRED AT.

OUTRAGE IN GLEN OF AHERLOW.

A Tipperary telegram received last night states—About 11.30 on Sunday morning rifle shots were discharged at the military station at Ballincourtie, Glen of Aherlow. The military replied with a machine gun for about ten minutes. The attackers, who fired from across the River Aherlow at about four hundred yards distance, withdrew after firing the first few volleys.

Subsequently the military searched some neighbouring houses and "held up" persons on the road. Yesterday two arrests were made, but one of the men was afterwards released.

A DOUBLE MURDER.

TWO FARMERS SHOT.

SHOCKING AFFAIR IN SOUTH ARMAGH.

The following official announcement was made yesterday:—In the early hours of this morning Hugh O'Hanlon and James Smith, of Camlough, Co. Armagh, were shot dead by a number of masked and armed men. There were labels attached to their bodies stating that they were spies.

Our Newry Correspondent states that the victims were two respectable farmers—James Smith, aged about 45, of Keggall, and Hugh O'Hanlon, aged about 34, of Eshwary, who, in his time, was a well-known long distance runner. The double murder has shocked the countryside. Both men were intimate with each other, and were on friendly terms with the police. This friendliness had caused them to receive threatening letters recently. Within the past month O'Hanlon got a second threatening letter, and was given permission by the authorities to carry firearms for his own protection.

The shooting of O'Hanlon was first taken in hand. At about four o'clock on Monday afternoon two strangers called at the residence of his brother, and asked for O'Hanlon, stating that they were looking for two stray horses. They were informed by his sister that he was not at home, and that no stray animals had been seen there. At that time O'Hanlon was at a neighbour's house assisting in cutting firewood. He remained there until after eleven o'clock.

At ten o'clock the homestead of the O'Hanlons was again visited by about eight or more masked men. They asked if the "boss" was in, and were told that he was not. Miss O'Hanlon asked if Michael, a younger brother, would do, and when he went out one of the masked men said, "That is not the man." Three men of the gang then forced their way inside, and, going upstairs, searched the deceased man's bedroom, and from underneath the bed tick took the revolver and ammunition with which he had been provided for his protection, after which they left, at the same time warning the occupants (who had made an ineffectual attempt to get a child out through the window to acquaint O'Hanlon of their fears) not to move outside on pain of being severely dealt with.

The raiders then walked down the road, and lay in ambush for O'Hanlon, who came along between 11 and 12, wholly unsuspicious of any danger. Fire was at once opened on him. It appears as if the unfortunate man made an attempt to escape by running, as his hat was picked up sixty yards away from his remains, which were found at about four o'clock in the morning by his sister and brother, who went to search for him. No shooting was heard at the house. The deceased man received several shots in the temple, face, heart, and chest. The widowed mother is grief-stricken at her terrible loss. The deceased man was her mainstay in the working of the farm. He was a cousin of Mr. Hugh J. McConville, J.P., Chairman of the Newry Urban Council, and a brother-in-law of Constable Lynch, who was ambushed at Greenore a few Sundays ago.

THE SHOOTING OF SMITH.

After the shooting of O'Hanlon, the murderers made their way to the house of Smith, in the townland of Keggall, a lonely place overlooking Camlough Lake. They had evidently been preceded by an advanced party, as Smith was awakened between 10 and 11 o'clock by a knock at his door, and on asking who was there received the reply, "Police." He at once hastily dressed himself, and, on coming downstairs, opened the door, when he was pulled outside. The only other occupants of the house were his housekeeper—an aged woman named Mrs. McCourt—and two servant boys, who were warned to keep inside, and not to show themselves. One raider snatched a light out of Mrs. McCourt's hand, and extinguished it. Outside, Smith, who was a man of powerful physique, held parley with his captors, and finally requested that his boots should be thrown out to him. Mrs. McCourt secured his slippers, which she threw to him from the upstairs window, and the doomed man was then taken away.

He was not shot for almost a couple of hours afterwards, as the occupants of the house could hear Smith being marched up and down the road by his captors. Eventually, between 2 and 3 o'clock they heard the report of a shot, but were afraid to venture out, and it was not until after 4 o'clock that they learned from the Rev. James R. Clarke, C.C., of the fate of their master. Father Clarke had been called upon between 2 and 3 o'clock by two men, who said that he was required at Smith's house for a sick call. He immediately mounted his horse, and rode to the house, where he was made acquainted with what had occurred there. Fearing the worst, he set out to make a search of the locality from which the sound of the firing had been heard, and in a few moments in a waste piece of ground up a by-road he found Smith lying dead. He had been shot through the temple and left breast.

THE WAR ON EX-SOLDIERS.

ANOTHER KILLED IN COUNTY KERRY.

John Fitzgerald, aged 25, an ex-soldier, who had been missing from his home in County Kerry since the 3rd inst., was found dead yesterday in a field some distance from his residence. There were three bullet wounds in his body, to which was attached a card, stating that he had been convicted and executed as a spy.

EX-SOLDIER KIDNAPPED.

The official reports issued from Dublin Castle yesterday state that Eugene Swanton, an ex-soldier, of Ballinacurra, Midleton, Co. Cork, was taken from his house at one o'clock on Sunday, and has not since been seen or heard of.

TWO SOLDIERS WOUNDED.

While Gunner Ernest Gibbons, of the Royal Garrison Artillery, Tallaght Camp, was at Hart's publichouse, Clondalkin, at 5.30 p.m. on the 5th inst., three armed men burst open the door and fired at him, causing him serious injuries. He was unarmed.

Dublin Castle reports that, while walking in the direction of Thomastown, Co. Kilkenny, on the afternoon of the 5th inst., Private A. Yeake, of the 2nd Green Howards, who was unarmed, was "held up" by three armed men, who shot him in the right hand and left leg. He is seriously wounded.

THREE EXECUTIONS IN DUBLIN.

SEQUEL TO THE KNOCKLONG SHOOTING.

POLICEMAN HANGED FOR MURDER.

Three men were executed yesterday morning at Mountjoy Prison, Dublin—namely, Edward Foley, of Galbally, Co. Limerick; Patrick Maher, of Knocklong, Co. Limerick; and Constable William Mitchell, of the Royal Irish Constabulary. Foley and Maher had been convicted by a courtmartial of the murder of Sergeant P. Wallace, R.I.C., at Knocklong on the 14th May, 1919, the decision of the courtmartial being promulgated on the 30th May last. Previous to the courtmartial these two men had been twice tried by civil courts, the jury on each occasion failing to agree. The murder of Sergeant Wallace took place during the rescue from a train at Knocklong of a prisoner who was being removed from Thurles to Limerick Jail.

Constable Mitchell was sentenced to death by a courtmartial for the murder of Mr. Robert G. Dixon, J.P., at his residence in Dunlavin, County Wicklow, during the small hours of the morning in the month of February last. Another constable, who was alleged to have been in company with Mitchell at the time of the murder, committed suicide by shooting himself shortly after being placed under arrest.

Foley and Maher were hanged together at 7 a.m., while Mitchell was executed an hour later. A small crowd gathered outside the entrance to the prison in the North Circular road at about 5 a.m., and shortly before 6 o'clock the Very Rev. Canon Waters, chaplain to the prison, and the Rev. Father McMahon, assistant chaplain, arrived, and were admitted at the prison gate. At 6 a.m. Mass was celebrated by Canon Waters, and at 6.30 a second Mass was celebrated by Father McMahon. The two prisoners protested their innocence of the crime with which they were charged to the end. At the end of the second Mass the executioner (Harte) and his assistant approached Foley and Maher, and started the process of pinioning, which was rapidly completed. A procession was then formed and proceeded from the condemned cell to the scaffold. When the bolt was drawn death in both cases appears to have been instantaneous. Prior to the execution, one of the Auxiliaries who was a member of the prison guard gave a scapular, which he had been wearing during the war and had received during a pilgrimage at Lourdes, to Foley, who placed the religious emblem round his neck. After Foley's death the scapular was returned to the guard.

There was no tolling of the prison bell before or after the executions, but at 8.15 a.m. an official notice was hung upon the spikes outside the jail gate announcing that the executions had taken place. This notice was torn down by the crowd.

OUTSIDE THE PRISON.

At the time of the executions there was a large crowd outside the prison, and prayers for the dying, and later for the dead, were recited. Shortly after the executions the crowd quietly melted away.

The following jointly signed message was published last evening as having been addressed by Maher and Foley "to all the boys":—

"Fight on, struggle on, for the honour, glory, and freedom of dear old Ireland. Our hearts go out to all our dear old friends. Our souls go to God at seven o'clock in the morning, and our bodies, when Ireland is free, shall go to Galbally. Our blood shall not be shed in vain for Ireland, and we have a strong presentiment going to our God that Ireland will soon be free, and we gladly give our lives that a smile may lighten the face of our dear 'Dark Rosaleen.' Farewell! Farewell! Farewell!"

The father of Foley and several female relatives of the two prisoners were present outside the prison.

EXECUTION OF MITCHELL.

William Mitchell, who was a member of the Church of England, was attended during his last moments by the Rev. Fergus Greer, Rector of St. George's Parish, and by the Rev. G. J. F. Vorschoyle. These clergymen arrived at Mountjoy at 7.30 a.m., and went to the condemned cell, accompanying the prisoner to the scaffold, and remaining with him until the end. He received the ministrations of the clergymen with reverence and attention, and protested to the end his innocence of the actual murder of Mr. Dixon. The crowd which had assembled outside in sympathy with Foley and Maher offered prayers for the condemned man Mitchell as well. Mitchell leaves a wife and child, who spent Monday with him in the condemned cell.

It was reported yesterday that a number of male friends of Foley and Maher, who had come to Dublin a couple of days ago, were arrested at the hotel where they were staying on Monday night.

SHOT AS A SPY.

Daniel McCarthy, aged 37 years, a man of feeble intellect and no fixed abode, wandered from Bantry to Ovens, County Cork, in search of work, states a police report. Soon after his appearance in Ovens he was found inside a military camp, and was detained as a suspicious character by the military authorities for a few days until his harmless character was established, when he was released. On May 28th his dead body was found lying on the road near Ovens Post Office. There were eight bullet wounds in his chest and five in his head, while a card pinned to his clothing bore the words, "Spies and informers beware. I.R.A." The report adds that presumably the Sinn Feiners murdered him because he was seen leaving the military camp, which led them to believe he was giving information to the Crown forces.

YOUNG MAN SHOT IN COUNTY MAYO.

The house of Mrs. Corrigan, of Polrany, County Mayo, was broken into at 4 o'clock yesterday morning by masked and armed men, who took out her son, Patrick, and shot him in the hip.

IRISH STOCK EXCHANGES.

DUBLIN.

FUNDS, GUINNESS, CITY STEAM, AND MARCONIS LOWER. RAILS MOSTLY WANTED. COATS BETTER.

Business was very quietly conducted on 'Change yesterday, with elements of irregularity in price movements rather clearly defined. The coal dispute's latest conference shows reason for hope, but other worries in the labour world give cause for uneasiness and discomfort among holders of certain commercial and industrial concerns. The new Conversion 3½ p.c. Redeemable Stock was steady, but other Government Funds were weaker, though at the close a little better support was offered. There was almost a nominal market in the Bank market, with Nationals alone quoted, and the price easier on profit-taking after recent strength. Sellers of Guinness Ord. again declared, and the price eased back another reasonable fraction. City Steam was officially listed 120 to 125, as recorded in this column the previous day. There was a further shrinkage in Marconi shares. The 1920 final dividend statement and the report and balance sheet is due this month.

The Funds were lower with the exception of the 3½ p.c. Conversion Loan, which rose ⅛ to 62. Consols, however, fell ½ to 46, War Loan 5 p.c. ⅛ to 87⅞, after opening at 87½, and India 3 p.c. ½ to 50.

In Banks, Nationals fell ⅛ to 16⅞, while Ulsters again closed 5½-⅝ nominally.

Dealing in Breweries was confined to Guinness Ord., which fell ¼ to 38⅛.

In Steam, City of Dublin closed 5½ lower at 120 to 125 nominally, the unofficial closing prices the previous day.

Marconis were dull. The Ord. fell 9d. to 48s., and the Pref 2s. 6d. to 47s. 3d.

Among Home Rails, Dublin and South Eastern Ord. closed 1½ higher at 15 to 15½ nominally. Great Northern Ord. fell ½ to 55, but the Guaranteed rose ½ to 55½. Great Southern and Western Pref. rose 2½ to 52½, and the Guaranteed repeated 56. Midland Great Western Debs. were ineffectively bid for, the 4 p.c. up to 45, and the 4½ p.c. closed 46 to 50, a rise of 2 in each case. West Clare Baronial fell 7s. 3d. to 60s. for a small lot.

In Bakery shares, Johnston Ord. rose 2s. 6d. to 67s. 6d., and in Drapery shares, Pim Bros. 6 p.c. Debs. were called 5 lower at 52 to 58 nominally.

As regards Manufacturing shares, Coats Ord. rallied 9d. to 46s. 6d. for a small lot. Lever Bros. 7 p.c. closed 15s.-15s. 3d.

In Trading, etc., Irish Times 2nd Pref. rose 6d. to 14s., and Brooks Thomas Pref. 6d. to 13s., while the Ord. repeated 21s. Dunlop Rubber 6 p.c. Debs. realised 96½ for an exceptional lot.

Extraordinary general meetings of shareholders in McBirney and Co., Dublin, were held last March and April, approving of the splitting of the Ordinary and Preference shares into denominations of £1 each. It will be announced later when the transfer books close for the issue of new certificates.

STOCKS AND COAL.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

Although it is not possible to write of business in the Stock Exchange as being any more active yesterday than on Monday, there were two or three features which, nevertheless, gave a certain amount of increased interest to the proceedings. Dealings commenced in the Derby and Reading portions of the new Five Town Corporation Loan. Both these loans, it will be recalled, were largely over-subscribed, and there is quite a good investment demand for them yesterday. The "stags" have no difficulty in snatching their profits. Both the loans opened ½ prem. The Reading portion was rather the more favoured, advancing ultimately to 1 prem., the Derby closed at ⅞ prem. The general opinion of the market is that both loans will establish themselves at a slightly higher level. It is expected that dealings in the Gateshead loan will start to-day, and, although nothing definite was known with regard to the Wallasey and Newport issues, a belief prevailed that in the case of the former the amount asked would be obtained, but that the Newport would not secure quite such a satisfactory [illegible].

MINING MARKET FIRMER.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

Although public interest in the Mining market remained at a very low ebb, and professional operations were by no means on a large scale, yet a brighter tendency developed in the Kaffir department yesterday. It is gradually being more widely recognised that quotations of some of the leading concerns have reached an attractive level, but for the moment the price of gold is, perhaps, the dominating factor. A further advance was scored yesterday, the quotation being 1s. 8d. higher at £5 9s. 3d. per oz. Although, as we have previously pointed out, this enhancement is due to the decline in the dollar exchange, yet it has to be admitted that the producing companies must benefit, and the half-yearly dividend announcements due this month are awaited with keen interest. There is moreover a growing conviction that the industrial position on the Rand is steadily improving. Just as in the dull time recently experienced, the shrinkages could not be attributed to actual sales, so the improvement in values was more the result of a change of sentiment than of any great increase in the volume of demand. Nearly all the usual active counters were harder, and but for the fact that Paris was inclined to offer its favourites it is quite possible the improvements in values would have been more marked.

OIL SHARE MARKET CLOSES STRONG.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

Oil Shares took an exactly opposite course yesterday to that pursued on the preceding day, for, while the market had none too bright an appearance at the commencement of business, the tendency improved as the day progressed, and at the close higher prices were general among the leading counters. The more speculative descriptions, however, still presented an irregular appearance. Business was largely of a professional character, and attention was devoted mainly to the leading descriptions. Considerable interest continued to centre on Anglo-Americans owing to the new capital proposals. Following the sharp fall on Monday the shares opened with a heavy appearance at 3⅞, and although a recovery occurred to 4 1/16 they receded in the "street" dealings to the overnight's level of 4. Shells had an easier tendency during the early hours, but met with support later, and finally registered an appreciable improvement. Royal Dutch closed above the worst, but were still lower on the day. The Mexican Eagle issue and Burmahs also made a good recovery after a poor start. Dulness again prevailed in the Trinidad group, losses occurring in Centrals, Apex, and United British. A feature among Roumanian issues was provided by Phœnix Oil and Transport, the shares coming into strong request and moving up sharply, the buying being accompanied by a rumour that the company has brought in a new well. In other directions English Oilfields changed hands with more freedom than of late, and left off at an advance, and Oil Trusts continued to receive attention. Closing prices:—

RUBBER SHARES DULL.

(FROM OUR FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The tone of Rubbers was scarcely so good, although there was really no movement calling for special notice. The week's statistics, which last week were in favour of holders of rubber, are this time against them, supplies having exceeded deliveries. Linggis were tolerably firm at 27s., and Highlands comparatively steady at 28s. 1½d. Rubber Trusts were 16s., Vallambrosas 10s. 6d., and Anglo-Malay 20s. 4½d., with United Serdangs at 2s. 10d.

THE MONEY MARKET.

CONDITIONS UNCHANGED.

Bank Rate (changed April 28th, 1921) ... 6½ p.c.

On the London Money market conditions in the short loan market have not undergone any marked change, and daily money has been in plentiful supply at 4½ down to 3½ p.c. In some quarters the tendency of discount rates was said to be easier, and a fair business passing in commercial paper at an average of 5½ p.c. for two and three months' maturities. August Treasuries, too, changed hands now and again at 5¼ p.c., while September Treasuries remained at 5¼ to 5⅝ p.c. For the most part, however, the market was quiet.

Following the continued fall in the New York exchange, gold was 1s. 8d. higher at 109s. 3d. per ounce fine. Available supplies were taken for America. Bar silver rose ⅛d. for spot to 34⅛d. per ounce, and was ⅛d. up for forward delivery at 34⅛d. per ounce. There was a little buying from India and China, and supplies were short. The market closed with an uncertain appearance.

Among foreign exchanges yesterday's tendency was continued, and the New York rate further fell heavily, and French, Belgian, and Italian currencies depreciated compared with the British pound. New York at one time was 3.76½, and, though it came up a little towards the close, was considerably down on balance. Similarly, Paris was up to 47.75, and at the close of public business was over ten centimes higher compared with the later rates of Monday night. What amounts to a slump in Italian lire continues, a net depreciation of about two lire to the £ being shown. German marks did not alter particularly. The Polish rate was still going upwards.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

For some time past a strike has been in progress at the Port of Buenos Ayres, which has had far-reaching effects, but the welcome news now comes to hand that "the Union of Maritime Workers has decided to resume work to-morrow." That was dated June 5th, so that it may be hoped that by this time business is again in full swing. The commercial situation in Argentina is still suffering from the depression which has been ruling for some months past, but there appear to be indications in certain directions of some improvement. Anything like speedy recovery has, however, undoubtedly been checked by the constant friction in the labour world. How far the railway earnings have been affected by the dockers' strike is difficult to say, but so far they have continued to show heavy decreases. The only hope of permanently better times lies in more harmonious relations between employers and employés—not alone in Argentina.

The establishment of a market in the new 3½ per cent. Conversion Loan has had the effect of depressing the price of Consols, which is not surprising, seeing that the character of the two securities is so nearly akin and that Consols are the dearer of the pair. Consols offer a return of £5 8/8 per cent. on the money, while the 3½ per cent. Conversion Loan, at 62½, yields £5 12/5, carrying, moreover, two months' interest on the present price. It pays, therefore, to exchange Consols into the Conversion Stock, and some holders are obviously attempting to effect the straddle, with the result that, as already noted, Consols are a dull market. Probably the actual amount of Consols held at the free disposal of members of the public is not large, for there are only 277 millions still outstanding, and out of this substantial blocks must be owned by corporations and companies that are not likely to sell.

The following returns for the month of May, 1921, have been received from the General Manager of the Consolidated Goldfields of New Zealand at Reefton, New Zealand:—"Blackwater Mines, Ltd.—Mill crushed 2,744 tons of ore, to the estimated value of gold £5,455, or £1 19/9½ per ton. Working expenses, including office and general expenses £4,710, or £1 14/3½ per ton. Working profit £745, or 5/5½ per ton."

The Anglo-South American Bank have received the following cable from their Buenos Ayres branch under date 3rd inst.:—"With regard to the labour unsettlement in the port of Buenos Ayres, the Government has adopted a firm attitude by repressing the extremist tendency in evidence among the various workmen's federations, and by affording adequate protection to non-union labour. The Government's attitude in this matter has been exemplified by the arrest of a prominent extremist leader. There are now about 2,000 non-union labourers at work in the port, and this number is tending to increase. The general strike ordered to take place on the 1st inst. proved abortive owing to the Government's action, and the general opinion is that, if the authorities continue to maintain their present attitude, the general labour situation will rapidly improve." (The settlement of the strike has been announced.)

It is announced that Lord Illingworth has been elected to a seat on the Board of the National Provincial and Union Bank of England, Ltd.

A circular to the shareholders of the El Oro Mining and Railway Company states that the Investment subsidiary, formed under Mexican law with a view to the employment of the El Oro's surplus funds, has been actively engaged in the development, under options to purchase, of various mines in the States of Zacatecas, Mexico, Hidalgo and Jalisco, and is likewise engaged in the examination of other mines and industrial enterprises. To provide funds for the work now in hand it is necessary for the Investment Company to increase its capital, and the El Oro Company has agreed to subscribe for 50,000 of its shares of 10 pesos each at par. Out of the shares thus subscribed for, the directors have decided to distribute, by way of a bonus dividend, 45,900 fully paid among the shareholders of the El Oro Company, being at the rate of one share of 10 pesos (equivalent to five United States dollars) for every 25 El Oro shares held. This distribution is being made out of the accumulated profits at the 30th June, 1920, and the question of the usual cash distribution out of the current year's profits will be dealt with in the ordinary course later in the year.

The manager of the Akoko Main Reef reports by cable having struck "a rich new chute at the 350 ft. level north, yielding by assay phenomenal results." The secretary adds:—"Confirmation of the figures telegraphed has been requested. In order to prove the battery value, the manager will mak a trial crushing at the earliest opportunity and the results so obtained will be promptly published."

It is hard to see how the House of Lords could have come to any other decision in the bonus shares and super-tax case. By a majority, they have decided that whatever the number of shares issued by a limited liability company the actual value of the assets remains the same. If there is one lesson which has been inculcated in the investor during the past twenty-five years—perhaps more particularly during the past two years—it is this. Assets are assets—and paper is paper. Shares benefit in market value by the existence of a reserve fund. To distribute that reserve fund in the shape of extra shares does not add to the value of the assets. They remain the same. They are merely spread, say, over two shares instead of one. There has been more than one instance of late years where the share capital has been largely increased by the issue of bonus shares to disguise the high rate of interest paid on the original smaller capital.

THE TRIM CADETS' CASE.

FINDING ON CHIEF COUNT NOT ANNOUNCED.

The trial by courtmartial concluded yesterday of the eight cadets attached to the Royal Irish Constabulary, Auxiliary Division, on charges of conspiracy and theft at Robinstown, near Trim, County Meath, on the night of 9th February. There were originally nine cadets on trial, but at the close of the case for the prosecution one of the accused men was discharged.

Counsel for the defence expressed appreciation of the manner in which the case had been conducted by counsel for the Crown, and also the patient manner in which the Court had listened to the great volume of evidence that had been produced.

Prosecuting Counsel endorsed what had been said in reference to the manner in which the trial had been conducted, especially by the Judge Advocate.

Addressing the Court on behalf of the accused men, counsel pointed out that the Crown had got to prove that there was an agreement amongst them to commit crime before there could be a conviction. He submitted that that had not been proved. The men had been brought together by orders of their superior officer to take part in the raid. That could not be construed into a charge of conspiracy, and of the forty men or more who took part in the raid there were but eight before the Court. There was no evidence that any of the articles were taken that night by the cadets.

Judge Advocate—They were missed shortly afterwards.

Defending Counsel—Yes, but it is not proved that we took them. It was for the Crown to prove that the accused men took the articles, and that had not been proved.

Prosecuting Counsel then addressed the Court, and said that the case was regarded by the Crown as of great importance. The Crown forces, he said, had to move rapidly about the country for the purpose of searching houses for arms and ammunition, and the responsible authorities were determined that no case of loot or of a character such as that alleged in this case should be overlooked or lightly treated, and that any members of the Crown forces against whom it was alleged that such offences were committed should be tried, and, if convicted, should be severely punished. The civilian population were necessarily unacquainted with the personality of these forces, and although identification might in some instances be difficult, still the authorities were determined that no countenance whatever should be given by them in any shape or form to conduct such as had been alleged in this case against the person or property of the civilian population. The evidence given showed how closely the eight men on trial were connected with the occurrence. On the question of the difficulties of individual identification in the case of the accused men, counsel submitted that they were all there, that the raid was not an honest raid, and that they were using it for the purpose of looting.

The Court having closed,

The President announced on its reopening that the accused were found not guilty on the second, third, fifth, and sixth, viz., the alternative charges.

Evidence of character was asked for, and the military records of the accused were handed in by an officer from the Records Department, War Office. They showed that all the accused bore good characters in the Army and the Royal Irish Constabulary.

Counsel for the defence brought under the notice of the Court the fact that the accused had been in custody for a considerable time.

The Court then closed.

COURTMARTIAL RESULTS.

BANBA HALL RAID SENTENCES.

DUBLIN WOMAN GETS PENAL SERVITUDE.

The following results of courtsmartial trials were issued by the authorities in Dublin yesterday:—

As a sequel to a raid on the Banba Hall, Parnell square, Dublin, a sentence of three years' penal servitude each was passed on Patrick Hogan, James H. Johnstone, Thomas Dixon, John O'Connor, John Walsh, Gerald McCarthy, John Canavan, John Coomer, and Martin Hackett. The raid took place on the 24th April, and in a cellar a Mills bomb was found. Three revolvers and some ammunition were found under the floor in a room, and elsewhere in the building were found one rifle, four revolvers, fourteen bombs, eleven detonators, and one bayonet. All the accused men were arrested on the premises, of which Hogan was caretaker.

Patrick McCormack, Grange, Knockcanage, Co. Louth, was sentenced to twenty years' penal servitude. He was tried at Belfast on the 27th May with having a six-chambered revolver, fully loaded with flat-nosed rounds, and twenty revolver cartridges, thirteen of which were flat-nosed, in his possession. It appears that the prisoner was working in a field when he was searched by the police. The articles were found on his person.

Miss Eileen McGrane, M.A., of 21 Dawson street, Dublin, was sentenced to four years' penal servitude. On the 31st December six revolvers and a quantity of ammunition were found in the flat occupied by the accused woman, who was arrested on the premises at the time of the raid.

The Rev. P. Gaynor and the Rev. M. Mackenna, of Mullagh, Co. Clare, were each sentenced to six months' imprisonment, without hard labour. On the 4th April the house occupied by both the prisoners was searched, and in a room two documents were found—No. 1 renouncing the protection of the British Government and "placing our houses and ourselves under the protection of responsible authorities of the Irish Republican Government"; No. 2, a document purporting to refer to the affairs of "Dail Eireann." Father Gaynor admitted responsibility for document No. 2, but did not believe that the first document was in the house. Father Mackenna made no statement.

MILITARY INQUIRIES.

A Military Court of Inquiry in lieu of an inquest assembled at Tralee on the 12th May, 1921, to inquire into the circumstances under which Head Constable William Kelleher Storey, R.I.C., met his death.

The Court found that Head Constable Storey was wilfully murdered by some person or persons unknown.

The circumstances in which John McCartney, of 47 Norfolk street, Falls road, Belfast, met his death were investigated at a Military Court of Inquiry, held in lieu of an inquest, at Cavan on May 9.

The Court found that the deceased man met his death through a gunshot wound inflicted by the Crown forces in the performance of their duty, McCartney being at the time in a state of armed insurrection against His Majesty.

THE REVENUE RETURN.

HEAVY NATIONAL EXPENDITURE.

The Revenue return issued last night for the week ended June 4 was bound to make a very poor showing, covering, as it does, a period in which heavy payments of interest on the war debt were due. National expenditure for the week amounted to no less than £64,099,814, which exceeded the income by the large sum of £52,291,265. Of the week's disbursements £43,988,038 went to pay war debt interest, and £19,565,500 was absorbed by the Supply Services. Towards the Revenue receipts, totalling £11,808,549, income tax contributed £3,295,000, excess profits duty £1,052,000, Customs £1,659,000, Excise £920,000, and the Post Office £500,000. On the week the sum of £52,831,000 has been added to the floating debt, thereby increasing the total outstanding to £1,367,422,000. Advances by the Bank of England have reached the heavy amount of £42,250,000, being required presumably in connection with the war debt interest obligations. Repayments to public departments amounted to £10,699,000, and sales of Treasury Bills have exceeded the maturities to the extent of £21,250,000, the addition of the later amount increasing the total outstanding to £1,172,817,000.

MARKET REPORTS.

GRAIN.

DUBLIN, Tuesday.—Neither buyers nor sellers apparently find much attraction in business through the medium of our Corn Exchange, and the building is comparatively deserted. Trade is at a very low ebb, and only once in a time do small parcels of choice good bulking Irish oats come to hand. For these occasional oddments good prices are easily obtainable. However, with considerable supplies of Canadian oats, and a direct arrival soon due in Dublin, oat consumers are very wary, and are buying cautiously. Ordinary blacks may be reckoned 20/- to 22/6 per barrel, and like whites, 27/6 to 30/- per barrel, but, of course, as previously stated, anything above the ordinary, commands special terms. Oddments of barley coming in make 20/- to 24/- and 25/- per barrel for feeding, and wheat around 60/- per barrel; but there is really no prime home-grown grain obtainable of late except in very small quantities.

I BUY OATS.—A. H. Smith, 10 Burgh quay, Dublin.—(Advt.)

FLOATING GRAIN CARGOES.—BALTIC, Tuesday.—WHEAT—Cargoes quiet; Barusso (62½ lbs.) Parcels of No. 1 Northern Manitoba afloat sellers 86/9, October-November sold 64/3, No. 2 hard winter July sellers 73/-, Barusso (62½ lbs.) afloat 81/-, Pacific end June 75/6, Australian afloat 76/6 per 480 lbs. MAIZE—Cargoes steady, with less offering; Plate steamers sellers 43/6 to 44/-, as to size, May-June shipment, and 42/3 June-July. Of European, the Rhuys, 3,750 tons Dan-Gal-Fox, loading sold 45/6, and a similar cargo afloat sellers 47/-. Plate May-June sold 41/6 to 41/9, June-July 39/9, July-August at 38/9 per 480 lbs. BARLEY quiet, unaltered. OATS firmly held; Plate clipped afloat sellers 29/6 f.a.q., May-June 27/9, June-July 27/3, No. 2 Canada Western just shipped 33/ per 320 lbs.

LIVERPOOL, Tuesday.—C.i.f. parcels of WHEAT were quiet at lower prices, No. 1 Manitoba October-November selling at 63/6, No. 2 arrived 83/9, and No. 2 red garlicky winter about loading 74/6 per qr.; No. 1 Manitoba June quoted 85/-, No. 2 hard winter July-August 68/6, Australian afloat 77/3, and Baril (62½ lbs.) loading 80/- per qr. No. 1 mixed and No. 2 ex store were allocated by the Government at the official prices. Wheat on the spot was quiet and easier in value. MAIZE—Spot parcels moved but moderately at about yesterday's rates. FLOUR ruled quietly steady at late currencies. BEANS, PEAS, and BARLEY scarce and firmly held, with latter dearer. OATS and OATMEAL showed no material change. MILL OFFALS steady for bran, while thirds were firm and dearer.

CATTLE.

BIRMINGHAM, Tuesday.—Pigs in fair supply and moderate demand, with prices about 1/- down. Quotations, per score, dead weight:—Sizeable bacons, 25/-; small pigs, to 25/-, and sows, 20/-.

LEEDS, Tuesday.—Supplies small owing to foot-and-mouth disease. Beasts, 227, 1/5 to 1/6½; sheep, 797, 1/7 to 1/9; heavy animals and ewes, 1/- and 1/4 per lb. No pigs or dairy cows.

SALFORD, Tuesday.—Cattle were mostly Norfolk-fed and of good quality, but little trade was effected, and prices are not quotable. Sheep were of good quality but trade was very poor, North Country sorts making 20d. to 22d., and Yorkshire animals 18d. to 20d. per lb., a large number remaining unsold. Lambs also met with a poor clearance at 26d. per pound. No fat pigs in the market. Numbers on offer—Cattle 123, sheep 1,712.

DERBY, Tuesday.—Small supplies of all classes of fat stock, which met a poor trade, cattle realising 12d. to 20d., sheep 14d. to 19d., and veal calves 12d. to 18d. per lb., while bacon pigs and porkers realised 17/6 and 18/- per stone respectively.

PROVISIONS.

LIVERPOOL, Tuesday.—BACON—Arrivals continue on a fair scale, and holders continue to offer freely of most cuts, and prices in some cases ruled in favour of buyers on long clear backs and bellies, though latter again meet a moderate demand; otherwise trading is limited. Canadian Wiltshires remain slow for heavy averages, but light and medium steadily held. Irish and Danish in very small compass, but Swedish and Dutch are fairly active. HAMS strong, especially short cut, which are raised 5/- per cwt., and long cut show a similar improvement in sympathy. Shoulders firm at late extreme prices for all descriptions, picnics being difficult to find even at the recent improvement. LARD on the spot is sparingly offered, and generally 1/- dearer, with a fair business reported, especially in boxes of American refined. CHEESE in fair demand, and a somewhat steadier feeling is shown by holders, especially on white, owing to relative scarcity. BUTTER rules quiet, without material changes in value of any description. EGGS firm, and dearer for Irish hen at 20/6 to 21/6 per 120, and duck are now more steadily held.

PATRICK KEHOE, Ltd., Irish Bacon Curers and Lard Refiners. Importers of American Provisions. (Estd. 100 years.)—103 FRANCIS ST., DUBLIN.—(Advt.)

REFINED LARD FUTURES.—LIVERPOOL, Tuesday.—Chicago cable advices turned out about as expected, but, with a good demand here, the market opened dearer, and gradually improved on scarcity of sellers, finishing 1/6 to 1/9 per cwt. over last night after large quantities changing hands. Sales covered July at 68/6 to 69/- and September 67/3 to 68/-, with June held at 70/-, and 69/6 per cwt. bidding. Influenced by better afternoon cables and continued good buying, values further improved, the market closing 2/3 to 2/6 higher on the day. July sold at 69/6, 69/9, 69/6, September 68/9, and October 69/- per cwt.

MANCHESTER, Tuesday.—BUTTER—The butter market was extremely quiet to-day, and Danish was lower at about 212/- to 215/-. Irish creameries selling around 200/. BACON—The best cuts of American and Canadian bacon met a fair inquiry at full rates. Continental and Irish grades, however, were exceedingly scarce. HAMS were in improved demand, and values had a firmer tendency. LARD received more attention from buyers, and English refined was advanced to 72/. CHEESE—Lancashire and Cheshire was adversely affected by the lower prices ruling for imported descriptions. EGGS were firmer, Irish 20/6 to 21/6, with Irish ducks at 19/- to 20/.

DUBLIN POTATO, Tuesday.—Trade follows a slow and narrow groove for old potatoes, and season is fast showing signs of partial dry up in the consumptive demand. Sound Dates bring 6/- to 6/6, and for some extra good lots a few sellers ask up to 7/- in a small way; Skerries, 11/6 to 12/6 per cwt.; new County Dublin potatoes and Canary Island potatoes in fair compass, former 3d. to 4d. per lb., and latter 2d. to 4d. per lb. in wholesale hands.

DUBLIN POULTRY, Tuesday.—Market, with increased supplies and close weather, much easier. Chickens and ducklings especially lower, say, 2d. to 4d. per lb., dead. Old fowl in dead order, unless very nicely dressed and finished, hard to clear. Fresh arrivals of rabbits wanted. Dead chickens, 2/2 to 2/6 per lb.; hens average 8d. to 10d. per lb., or best 4/- to 5/- each; ordinary, 2/6 to 3/6; prime large young ducks, 6/- to 6/6; prime fat, smaller breed, 4/- to 5/-; old, 1/6 to 2/- each; Guinea fowl, 5/-, in feather; young pigeons, 1/6; old, 1/-; quests, 9d.; rabbits, best and full-sized grazers, 1/3 each.

DUBLIN FISH, Tuesday.—Fair supplies of country and local white fish; no steamers yet on market; salmon plentiful, including nearly 100 fish from Ringwood; also on market 16 chests lobsters and 22 boxes mackerel. Salmon, 1/4 to 1/9 per lb.; best lobsters, 12/6 to 15/- per 13; seconds, 7/6 to 10/-; small, etc., 3/- to 5/- per 13; turbot, 2/- to 10/- and 15/-; brill, 6d. to 3/- and 4/- each; best soles, 30/- to 40/-; medium, 15/- to 20/- per 9 pairs; slips, 7/6 to 10/- per 9 pairs; large plaice, 6/- to 8/- per 4; others, 4/- to 6/- and 8/- per 8; half-boxes of plaice, 60/- to 130/-; codfish, 30/- to 50/-; ray, 10/- to 20/-; mackerel around 14/- to 15/- and 16/- per box.

New Jerseys quoted at 27/- to 28/-; St. Malo, 24/- to 26/- per bag, and Cherbourgs, 23/- to 24/- per case; old Scotland King Edwards, best, 13/-; Arran Chiefs, 7/- to 8/-, and Evergoods, 6/- to 7/- per cwt.

DUBLIN, Tuesday.—The butter market this week again opens easier, and there is still an uncertain undertone in matters. The fall of Danish produce on English markets and expected further depression, is against creamery producers at this side; at all events, the trade appears to be devoid of confidence, and current prices for creams may be quoted 1/8½ to 1/9 per lb.; secondary descriptions around 1/7 per lb. A few lots of farmers' hand separators have come in, and made up to 1/7 and 1/7½ per lb. Crocks from 1/4 to 1/6, and lumps down as low as 1/1 per lb. Factories are in fair supply, and are clearing well in relatively good value at 1/4 to 1/5½ per lb. The position of the [illegible] trade is unaltered, and supplies for the reasons previously stated are still within narrow compass, and with a good consumptive demand there is less particularity with regard to selection of eggs; large and small sizes in packing are making uniform prices, but there are still serious complaints about stale and overheld stuff, and although parcels, not too bad in this respect, can be cleared at the moment at a price, the continuance of sending such forward to principal markets will assuredly eventually cause trouble and loss to all concerned. For selected eggs at present prices are from 22/- to 23/- per 120; average case consignments from reliable sources 19/6 to 20/6; seconds from 16/-. Duck eggs are not in keen request but sound qualities are making similar top prices to hen eggs viz., from 19/6 to 23/- per 120; inferior and doubtful descriptions practically neglected.

CORK BUTTER, Tuesday.—Firsts, 153/-; fresh butter, 162/- per cwt.

New Jerseys 7/6 per 21lbs., 30/4 cwt.; carrots, 3/- cwt.; cucumbers 9/- to 10/-, cauliflowers 7/- to 11/-, cabbages 1/- to 1/6, lettuce 2/- to 2/6 per dozen.

CLYDE CRUSHED SUGAR, Tuesday.—Official Report—Greenock refiners still closed down; no change, therefore, to report.

HAY AND STRAW.

DUBLIN, Tuesday.—We had a fair market of Co. Dublin and country hay forward here this morning. Trade ruled rather tedious all round, and generally previous prices proved difficult to repeat. Strictly choice first crop hay, however, being very scarce at opening, occasionally realised 8/6 to 8/9 per cwt., perhaps a little more for racing stables. In routine business subsequently values worked out much as follows:—Prime first crop hay, 8/- to 8/3; fair, 7/9; second and third crop, 6/6 to 7/6 and 7/9; fair ditto, 6/- to 6/3; best old meadow, 5/- to 5/6 and 5/9; other classes, 3/- to 4/9 per cwt. Straw plentiful and dull, especially wheaten. Both wheaten and oaten averaged 2/6 to 3/-, and best qualities, 3/6, although a few special lots of oaten went 3d. to 6d. more in early sales. Market, however, closed stagnant around 2/- per cwt. for wheaten and oaten.

TRADE REPORTS.

MANCHESTER, Tuesday.—Business at present is practically non-existent. Now that a settlement of the coal strike seems possible it is regrettable that we should be plunged into a deadlock between millowners and operatives, especially as there are brighter prospects of trade with China. The point at issue is not insurmountable, and should be speedily settled if looked at dispassionately by both sides.

LIVERPOOL COTTON (Closing), Tuesday.—American dull. Brazilian quotations raised 16 points. East Indian unchanged. Egyptian neglected. June 8.03d., July 8.21d., Aug. 8.34d., Sept. 8.47d., Oct. 8.59d., Nov. 8.67d. Sales 3,000. Imports 9,247 bales. Market steady.

LONDON WOOL SALES.

The June series of London Colonial wool sales commenced last evening, with catalogues comprising 12,201 bales of free wools. There was an exceptionally large attendance; and, with good competition from all sections of the trade, practically the whole of the offerings was cleared, Continental buyers securing the greater share. Merinos were on average 5 to 10 per cent. dearer than at the close of last series, the advance being most noticeable on fine quality wools suitable for the Continental trade. Values for clothing sorts showed no material change. Fine cross-breds were 5 per cent. dearer, but medium and coarse qualities were unchanged as compared with last sales rate. The new clip from Falkland Islands and Punta Arenas opened up in good condition and attractive in appearance. They were actively supported, prices ruling fully 5 to 10 per cent. over rates current in May. Present series of auctions are so far arranged to terminate on Saturday, 18th inst.

DUBLIN AND DISTRICT.

IRISH FISH FOR ENGLISH MARKETS.—About 1,000 boxes of mackerel and 200 to 300 boxes of salmon have been sent in one day from the North Wall to England. Chopped ice is generously used in the packing of the fish, and at North Wall another packing of ice is given before the fish are placed aboard ship.

ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO STEAL.—In the South Dublin Police Court yesterday three boys—James Whelan, William Hart, and James O'Leary—were charged before Mr. Cooper, K.C., with having conspired to steal money and with stealing £2, the property of Maud Healy, of Oxmantown road, Dublin. The defendants had, it appeared, sold blocks of wood to Maud Healy, and the blocks were delivered by Whelan. It was found that two £1 notes were missing from a side table after he left. Whelan pleaded guilty, stating that he had given Hart £1 and O'Leary 3/6. He was bound over on repaying the money, and Hart and O'Leary were discharged.

LICENSED GROCERS' AND VINTNERS' PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.—Yesterday the weekly meeting of the Committee of the Licensed Grocers' and Vintners' Protection Association was held in the offices, Commercial Buildings, Dame street, Dublin. Mr. Michael Humphreys presided. Ten new members were elected. A report was received from the organiser, Mr. Hackett, in regard to his work of the previous week. He stated that his work lay in the County Meath, and everywhere he went the efforts of the organisation on behalf of the trade met with cordial approval and support. The Chairman called attention to the fact that recently some prosecutions had been brought against traders for selling during closing hours. He felt that he was voicing the feelings of his colleagues on the committee, and the rank and file of their members outside as well, when he stated that they had no sympathy whatever with such conduct, and it was the desire of the Association that while those traders were, he was glad to say, very few, there would be no complaints at all in the future.

FRIARSTOWN STUD FARM AND TRAINING ESTABLISHMENT,
CURRAGH, COUNTY KILDARE.

WE are instructed by the Owner, N. Sikes, Esq., to Sell the above Property by PUBLIC AUCTION
On TUESDAY, 14th inst. (JUNE, 1921).

The Sale will take place at 21 LINCOLN PLACE, DUBLIN, at the hour of One o'clock (summer time). The Property, which contains about 170 acres, is held in Fee-simple, subject to a small terminable annuity to the Land Commission. Within recent years Friarstown has been used as a Stud Farm and Training Establishment, having been specially equipped for that purpose regardless of cost, and it is a well-known fact that every horse bred and raced from this establishment has been a winner, from the smallest to the highest class racing in England and Ireland—Galvey, who, for instance, was sold in 1920 for £10,000.

Friarstown adjoins Little Curragh, from which there is an entrance near Rossmore Lodge. The lands, which are of the highest quality, are suitable for finishing cattle. The texture of the soil is good, comprising deep rich loam on limestone. The grasses, which are of the best and succulent, are indigenous to this fertile soil. An opportunity is not only afforded to any persons requiring a well-equipped stud farm and training establishment, but also to others who require a first-class farm with nice residence and out-offices, all of which are either modernised or built within recent years. This Establishment has its own water, and electric light supply worked by machinery. We can state from inspection that this property is in first-class order. Full particulars from
